Charge count rises from 89 to 103 in 'puppy mill' case

How to help rescued dogs

Anyone who wishes to help the 103 dogs recovered Wednesday from a Vine Grove mobile home is encouraged to do so through donations.

The dogs are not available for adoption because they are being held as evidence.

The dogs were taken to the Hardin County Animal Control shelter on Nicholas Street and Pet Protection Inc. on West Dixie Avenue, both in Elizabethtown, after owners Brian McCarthy, 48, and his wife, Joyce McCarthy, 47, were arrested and charged with 103 counts of second-degree cruelty to animals.

Animal Control Supervisor Jerry Foley said his organization plans to post a list of items that would be useful for the shelter at www.hcky.org.

Residents also can help by donating money at the PAWS Inc. website, www.pawsdonations.org, he said.

Pet Protection President Gayle Johnson said her organization also can benefit from monetary donations.

Her organization houses nursing mothers and puppies, and puppies too young for the shelter population at Animal Control.

Johnson said there is no need for items at this time and animal control is providing needed dog food.

Money serves best because the organization might be in charge of vaccinations and spaying or neutering for many of the dogs if the McCarthys don't get them back. Pet Protection must pay for veterinary services, she said.

Money can be donated at Buried Treasure next door to Pet Protection at 326 W. Dixie Ave.

Neither organization has expressed a need for volunteers at this time.

For more information, call Animal Control at 769-3428.

A Vine Grove couple arrested Wednesday on charges of second-degree cruelty to animals now faces 103 counts, rather than the 89 counts originally filed.

Brian McCarthy, 48, and his wife, Joyce McCarthy, 47, were released Wednesday night from the Hardin County Detention Center on a $2,500 unsecured bond each.

Arraignment for both has been set for April 4 at the Hardin County Justice Center.

The McCarthys each faced 89 counts of cruelty to animals when a preliminary count listed that as the number of dogs and puppies found at their home at 103 Gaylene Drive. More charges were added when a final tally of dogs reached 103. Some of the dogs are pregnant.

Vine Grove Police Capt. Dale Riggs said there is evidence the dogs, which appeared to be living in unsanitary condi-

CMO expects to fit well at HMH

Toadvine says new job is 'ideal situation'

By MARTY FINLEY
mfinley@thenewsenterprise.com

Dr. Stephen Toadvine said his business relationship with Hardin Memorial Hospital President and CEO Dennis Johnson and the sterling reputation of HMH in the health-care industry made the hospital an attractive new home.

Toadvine, a Florence native, was announced Tuesday as new chief medical officer at HMH. His scheduled start date is April 30.

"I'm extremely excited and grateful for the opportunity," he said.

Toadvine replaces Dr. Jody Prather, the first chief medical officer in HMH history, who left in January to serve as chief medical officer for Baptist Healthcare System.

Toadvine said he holds HMH in high regard and said the Elizabethtown role is perfectly suited for him. He and his wife look forward to immersing themselves in the Hardin County community, he said.

In addition to his relationship with Johnson, Toadvine said he had built relationships with Prather and former HMH CEO David Gray, which made the position enticing.

Toadvine has a master's degree in medical management from Carnegie Mellon University and a master's degree in public health from the University of Pittsburgh Graduate School of Public Health. He received a doctorate of medicine from Northwestern University Medical School.

A son of missionaries, Toadvine said he found himself at a career crossroads because he had to choose between medicine and the ministry and church work his parents had chosen before him.

Hosparus Tea and Auction fundraiser set for March 31

Organizers hope to generate $20,000

By AMBER COULTER
acoulter@thenewsenterprise.com

Residents are invited to help Hosparus make sure everyone has access to care when they face life-limiting issues.

The annual Elizabethtown Hosparus Tea and Auction is from 2-4 p.m. March 31 at Severns Valley Baptist Church on Ring Road in Elizabethtown. Doors open at 1:30 p.m.

The event, themed "Once Upon a Tea," is hosted by Hosparus of Central Kentucky to benefit patients and families involved with the organization.

The auction and tea has been hosted for at least 15 years with a different theme each year, said Lisa Sanford, senior manager of development and community relations for Hosparus of Central Kentucky.

"It's amazing to see what everybody comes up with from year to year based on that year's theme," she said.

Hosparus is a nonprofit organization that provides care, comfort and counseling for people in Kentucky and southern Indiana who facing life-limiting illnesses. The organization cares for more than 5,500 patients and their families each year.

As a nonprofit, an important part of Hosparus' mission is to make sure everyone who is eligible has access to care, regardless of the ability to pay, Sanford said.

Representatives hope the event will raise $20,000 to support that mission, higher than the goals in past years.

"We want to make sure everyone who is facing end-of-life issues knows that there is someone there to help them through this," she said. "We want to make sure that Hosparus care is accessible to everyone who needs it."

The auction will feature purses, hats, pictures and various other donated items to bring in income for the organization, Sanford said.

"We have just a little bit of everything," she said. "We're just really fortunate that the community businesses and people donate these items to be auctioned off."

Local celebrity waiters will work at the event for tips, which they plan to donate to Hosparus.

Celebrity waiters this year include State Rep. Tim Moore, State Sen. Dennis Parrett, county Magistrate Lisa Williams and Elizabethtown Councilwoman Edna Burger.

Tickets are available for $30 and can be purchased at the Hosparus Elizabethtown office at 105 Diecks Drive.

The reservation deadline is Monday. Reservations will not be accepted without payment. Reservations and over-the-phone payments can be made by calling Hosparus at 737-6300. A limited number of seats are available.

For more information, contact Sanford at lisanford@hosparus.org or call the Hosparus office.

Sanford said receiving help from Hosparus isn't about giving up. It's about getting professional help so people can continue doing the things they enjoy.

"This is really about quality of life and people being able to live their lives to the fullest," she said.

Sanford hopes anyone who needs Hosparus would not hesitate to call because the organization is there to help them through that time, which can be difficult for many people and their families.

Caring for families as well as patients physically, emotionally and spiritually is an important part of the service Hosparus offers, she said.

"It's a relief," she said. "When you get a life-limiting diagnosis, you want to know someone is there to help."

The organization also offers bereavement counseling and pediatric programming.

Kentucky Fair Board president announces retirement

Harold Workman, whose job status as president of the Kentucky Fair Board has been in question, has announced he is retiring at the end of the year.

Workman has been involved in controversies recently over the firing of the general manager of the KFC Yum! Center and reports that he had fallen into disfavor among some board members.

According to published reports, the board also suffered a revenue drop in recent years with the razing of the Executive Inn, closure of Kentucky Kingdom and move of the University of Louisville basketball teams from Freedom Hall to the Yum Center.

Workman, fair board president and CEO since 1993, makes $249,260 a year, according to a state database.

Senate would abolish Lt. Gov.'s housing allowance

By ROGER ALFORD

The Associated Press

FRANKFORT — State senators met privately Thursday afternoon to review a bare-bones budget proposal that includes a tentative plan to eliminate the lieutenant governor's $30,000-a-year housing allowance.

Lt. Gov. Jerry Abramson receives that in lieu of living in the mansion provided for him and his wife.

The Senate Appropriations and Revenue Committee scheduled a vote on the two-year budget Thursday afternoon. After that, the full Senate could vote.

Three Democratic senators — Tim Shaughnessy of Louisville, Kathy Stein of Lexington and Robin Webb of Grayson — objected to the closed-door budget discussions and refused to take part.

Secrecy in the process of developing a budget isn't new in the Kentucky Legislature. Even as the Appropriations and Revenue Committee prepared to vote late Thursday, the full budget proposal hadn't been released publicly.

"Every year we say we're going to do better," Webb said. "Nothing much changes."

House lawmakers already have passed budget proposals for the executive, legislative and judicial branches of state government. They've also approved a Road Fund budget.

Gov. Steve Beshear called for sharp cuts to most government agencies and programs when he initially presented his budget plan to lawmakers. Cutting Abramson's housing allowance is a new proposal.

Details emerging about the Senate's budget appeared to put a proposed college scholarship program for Appalachian students in jeopardy.

A briefing document showing highlights of the proposed budget says the Senate "does not concur" with a House proposal regarding what's dubbed the Kentucky Appalachian College Completion Program. That program would provide grants of up to $6,000 a year to students attending a handful of private colleges in the mountain region.

The proposal is a spinoff from an earlier recommendation to turn the private University of Pikeville into a public university to boost educational levels and spur the economy in central Appalachia. Widespread opposition led to that idea being withdrawn.

The grants would have been paid for from revenue from an existing tax on mined coal with the intent of increasing the number of people in the mountain region with college degrees. The idea is to make the impoverished central Appalachian region more appealing to businesses looking to build or relocate.

233rd headed to Fort Stewart

The News-Enterprise

The 233rd Transportation Company, which left Fort Knox last summer for duty in Kuwait, won't be coming back to the post for very long.

The U.S. Army Forces Command released a permanent order Thursday which stations the 233rd units at Fort Stewart, Ga., by Oct. 16.

The decision to move the heavy equipment transporters, which will entail 178 military positions, was made to better support training needs of the unit and transportation needs of the three heavy brigade combat teams at Fort Stewart, according to a Fort Knox news release.

The 233rd Transportation Company is comprised of a headquarters element, 2nd platoon and 3rd platoon from Fort Knox; a 1st platoon at Fort Stewart; and a 4th platoon at Fort Benning, Ga.

The entire unit is deployed to Kuwait in support of Operation New Dawn. The tour is scheduled to end this summer and those who deployed from Fort Knox will return and later move with the unit or be reassigned.

The company is on its seventh deployment since 2003 and has been headquartered at Fort Knox since August 1996.

Located near Savannah, Fort Stewart's mission is both as a training base and power projection platform which means it can deploy troops rapidly by sea and air. Hunter Army Airfield at Fort Stewart has the Army's longest runway.

While on its current overseas assignment, the soldiers were adopted by Hardin Memorial Health.

HMH staff members sent tons of food products, personal items and other goods to the soldiers as a part of the Adopt a Platoon program promoted by the Hardin County Chamber of Commerce.

At last July's casing of the colors before the deployment, each member of the heavy truck unit received a Brighton Collectables Yellow Ribbon charm pendant courtesy of HMH and USA Cares.

House passes relief bill for tornado victims

By RANDY PATRICK
The Associated Press

FRANKFORT — Those working to rebuild in 21 tornado-ravaged counties could be getting some tax relief.

The bill sponsored by Democratic Rep. Mike Denham of Maysville passed the House of Representatives 96-0 Thursday, the day after it was approved in committee. It now moves to the Senate.

It would help people rebuild in the counties declared presidential disaster areas after the March 2 tornadoes by having the state treasury refund the 6 percent state sales tax for three years on building materials if the buildings are reconstructed or repaired where the losses occurred. Owners would provide receipts for the materials and proof of losses by their insurance companies or the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

The bill also would give school districts in those counties 10 extra emergency days that don't count toward their average daily attendance and ensure that school employees in the affected districts not lose any pay or benefits as a result of lost work days. Employees would still have to complete work, but it wouldn't have to be in their regularly assigned areas.

Driving blind: It's tough to catch texters in the act

By LIBBY CUNNINGHAM
Kentucky Enquirer

Imagine driving the length of a football field blindfolded.

It's what Kentuckians do every time they take their eyes off the road to focus on a cellphone.

It's 4.5 seconds where drivers are out of control, but despite a statewide ban on text messaging and driving, local law enforcement aren't catching many in the act.

They say it's too hard to prove.

In the past four months, three auto accidents due to mobile phone distraction occurred within the Erlanger Police Department's jurisdiction. But the department probably has only written one ticket to a motorist violating texting and driving laws, said public information officer Steve Castor.

"Officers, of course, they do look for it. We haven't had any specific targeted assignments," Castor said. "But as you can imagine, it's kind of a difficult law to enforce."

Officials say it's difficult because the law is specific to text messaging, and texting isn't as overt as other driving distractions, so it's hard to catch.

"So many distractions occur," Castor said. "There are no laws about putting makeup on in the car, no laws about eating and driving."

Cellphone use while driving has distracted one driver to death this year and injured 57 people, according to the Kentucky Office of Highway Safety.

In total, it's caused 186 crashes.

"As far as I'm concerned, emailing and texting and taking your eyes off the road, that's a distraction and that's the spirit of the law," said Bill Bell, Kentucky Office of Highway Safety director.

That's what should be obeyed, Bell said, and results in a $25 fee that, like the seat belt law, people usually pay instead of fight.

"I'm sure it's frustrating for law enforcement because it's a tough law to enforce," Bell said.

In the future, Bell said he hopes behaviors behind the wheel will change.

"It's more of a social norming issue," he said. "What I would like to see is texting while driving becoming socially unacceptable."

Until then, law enforcement has to trust motorists.

Villa Hills Police Chief Dan Goodenough said

while the city hasn't written texting and driving citations that he's aware of, he has seen drivers pull off the road and put their cars in park to send a message.

"They took due diligence to remove themselves from moving traffic," he said. "We'd want to commend them."

In crashes, there has to be probable cause before officers assume they are related to mobile distractions.

Embattled Fla. police chief steps down temporarily

By KYLE HIGHTOWER
The Associated Press

SANFORD, Fla. — The police chief who has been bitterly criticized for not arresting a neighborhood watch volunteer in the shooting death of an unarmed black teenager announced Thursday he is temporarily stepping down to let passions cool.

Sanford Police Chief Bill Lee's decision came less than a day after city commissioners gave him a "no confidence" vote, and after a couple of weeks of protests and uproar on social media websites. Lee has said evidence in the case supported George Zimmerman's claim that the Feb. 26 shooting of 17-year-old Trayvon Martin was self-defense.

"I do this in the hopes of restoring some semblance of calm to a city which has been in turmoil for several weeks," Lee said.

Martin was returning from a trip to a convenience store when Zimmerman started following him, telling police dispatchers he looked suspicious. At some point, the two got into a fight and Zimmerman pulled out his gun.

Zimmerman told police Martin attacked him after he had given up on chasing the teenager and was returning to his sport utility vehicle.

The shooting ignited racial tensions in the Orlando suburb. Civil rights groups have held rallies in Florida and New York, saying the shooting was unjustified.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF

CORONER SAYS WHITNEY HOUSTON DIED FROM DROWNING, BUT COCAINE AND HEART DISEASE CONTRIBUTED. Coroner's officials have ruled Whitney Houston died by drowning, but heart disease and cocaine use were contributing factors.

The announcement Thursday ends weeks of speculation about what killed the Grammy-winning singer on Feb. 11.

Houston was found submerged in the bathtub of her room at the Beverly Hilton Hotel on the eve of the Grammy Awards.

Several bottles of prescription medications were found in her hotel room, but coroner's officials said they weren't in excessive quantities.

Coroner's spokesman Craig Harvey said cocaine metabolites were found in Houston's system, and it was listed as a contributing factor in her death. He said the results indicated Houston was a chronic cocaine user.

STANDOFF IN FRANCE ENDS WITH ISLAMIC SUSPECT SHOT IN THE HEAD, POLICE SEEKING ANY ACCOMPLICES. In a dramatic end to a 32-hour standoff, a masked French SWAT team slipped into the apartment of an Islamist extremist Thursday, sparking a firefight that ended with the suspect jumping out the window and being fatally shot in the head.

Mohamed Merah, 23, was wanted in the deaths of three French paratroopers, three Jewish schoolchildren and a rabbi – all killed since March 11 in what Merah reportedly told police was an attempt to “bring France to its knees.”

Police had been trying to capture him alive since a predawn raid Wednesday to arrest him at his apartment in the southwestern city of Toulouse.

SANTORUM TRIES TO OVERCOME DELEGATE DEFICIT BY IMPROVING MATH IN STATES THAT VOTED WEEKS AGO. Rick Santorum is falling so far behind Mitt Romney in the race for Republican delegates that his best chance might be in states that voted weeks ago.

The chief rival to the front-running Romney, Santorum is trying to improve his lot in places like Iowa and Washington, where local caucuses were just the first step in determining delegates to the Republican National Convention. In those states and a few others, supporters are now preparing for county, congressional district and state conventions, where the campaigns hope to keep their delegates – and possibly poach some from other candidates.

Kids in foster care deserve better transition to adulthood

ISSUE: Foster-care transition billOUR VIEW: Offers a better future for kids

While some 18-year-olds might be well-prepared for self-sufficiency as young adults, most of us would agree many aren't.

Even the best of the best among young people have not had the life experience to successfully handle all the unexpected challenges that life can raise. When such challenges occur, sons and daughters seek out parents for assistance, and many times financial help, in overcoming obstacles. And though we might complain a bit when having to do so, deep inside we're glad they come to us and happy that we are able to come to their rescue.

But what happens when these challenges and obstacles occur for young adults who have "aged out" of foster care? Who is readily there to help them overcome a life emergency?

Under current law, at age 18 foster kids "age out" and no longer are eligible for the care provided them through the system. For those who exit foster care, the statistics stacked against their success as independent young adults aren't good.

Only about one of every four of those aging out of the system do so with positive momentum for success. Nationally, in fact, the total cost on society in terms of welfare, Medicaid, incarceration, lost wages, unplanned pregnancy and other significant impact exceeds $5.6 billion for what many in the foster care system refer to as "bad outcomes" or those who fail to succeed as independent, self-sufficient young adults.

Senate Bill 213, sponsored by Sen. Ken Winters, R-Murray, and unanimously passed by the Senate Health and Welfare Committee, seeks to improve these odds by making it easier for foster care youths to continue under state care until the age of 21 if they choose to do so.

Foster care youth who are members of a movement called True UP originated the bill's foundation in effort to improve the timing and clarity of communication with their social workers and eliminate barriers they have experienced in continuing care.

If passed into law, the provisions of SB 213 will accomplish several important improvements for foster kids.

Rather than the six months provided under current law in which youths have to decide if they wish to continue under state care, the proposed legislation would extend the period to one year.

It also requires state social workers to begin actively counseling these youth about their options six months prior to their 18th birthday.

For those who choose to continue under foster care, the period between 18 and 21 years of age would be identified as "transitional living support" rather than "extended commitment" – a more fitting description of what actually is occurring for these young people.

Too many foster kids report they never had clear or timely communication with their social worker about the options and possible consequences of their choice to continue in or exit foster care. Without this, they aren't fully prepared to deal with responsibilities that immediately come with independent living. The result, too often, is a life stuck in poverty and dependency upon other social services.

A better approach is one that provides the best possible counseling for youth about the important decision they're faced with making at 18. It's one that provides a better transitional path to college or trade skill training and a self-sufficient adult life.

SB 213 offers legislative and procedural improvements that would provide these improvements. It is legislation that would provide a very marginal continued foster care cost now, but one that would save multiples in social services costs later on. It is a bill that legislators should support and enact.

Time for GOP to unite

If there is one thing most Republicans, many Democrats and independents can agree on is they want a change in the White House. The question now remains whether all members of the GOP will face reality, end divisiveness and bring an end to the race for 1,144 delegates. Mitt Romney has amassed more delegates than all of his opponents totals combined, more than twice the delegates of his closest opponent, and won more than twice the number of states and territories of his closest opponent.

The main issue now and in November is, and will be, who can restore America to economic strength and whether we wish to pass on the burden of an escalating budget deficit to future generations. The person with a proven success record in starting businesses and creating jobs is Mitt Romney. He has the experience and vision to get America out of our economic quagmire.

Four years ago, after Super Tuesday, a very gracious Mitt Romney stepped aside. It is time for GOP voters to say thank you to Rick Santorum, Newt Gingrich and Ron Paul. You fought a good fight. It's time to get on to the main event. Kentucky GOP voters on May 22 should affirm, to paraphrase our state motto, "United we stand, divided we fail."

Chiropractors want lawmakers to manipulate reimbursement rates

Special interest groups are camped out in Frankfort these days seeking special treatment from those charged to act in the best interest of all Kentuckians – not just a few.

Nowhere is this more a problem than in health-care related services where federal mandates and unsound policies have distorted the health-insurance marketplace to the point that any semblance of free-market activity is hardly recognizable.

It seems interjecting free market principles that expand choices, improve quality and diminish costs would be the policy equivalent of unscrambling Humpty Dumpty's egg.

For more than five years, Kentucky chiropractors have lobbied lawmakers to mandate higher reimbursement fees. This year, they put on a full-court press for House Bill 202 that requires insurers to reimburse chiropractors at rates no lower than those found in the Workers' Compensation Fee Schedule.

Frustrated by reimbursement rates that have become tighter than a newly tuned guitar string, chiropractors want lawmakers to get involved and force insurance agencies to ante up.

I actually sympathize with the chiropractors.

They are getting it from every direction. They often get the shaft from others in the medical community when chiropractic patients get rid of their pain without expensive drugs and surgery. To add insult to injury, these professionals frequently earn lower reimbursement rates from insurers than other providers receive.

After my comments in a recent Bluegrass Institute news release opposing mandated rates, the emails rolled in from unhappy chiropractors.

"We have been treated very poorly and criminally by the insurance companies," said Winchester's Perry Williams. "They won't play fair... We have been cut 38 percent over the past five years. I get checks for 76 cents from insurance companies while the patient pays $25 to $35 for the service."

Many chiropractors lament their problems with insurers have worsened over the past several years and they want legislative relief.

While there are mandates for reimbursement fees tied to the federal Medicaid and Medicare programs, several policymakers have confirmed that passage of HB 202 would result in our state government doing for chiropractors what it has done for no other health-care provider: ensuring – by statute – they are paid a certain fee.

As a lifetime fan and patient of chiropractic care, I fully support chiropractors manipulating my spine to relieve the pain of pinched nerves and providing one of the best methods of injury treatment and preventive care available.

However, I cannot support the manipulation of state statutes to ensure reimbursement rates – for any group.

This has nothing to do with whether chiropractors deserve a higher reimbursement rate. They do.

The problem is, as I stated in my response to one of those emails from a concerned chiropractor: "I just don't think government should be used to establish reimbursement rates for one particular health-care sector."

To which my chiropractor friend emailed claiming to "understand" my point, but wistfully stated that "government should be able to step in where there is a need."

Actually, one of our greatest "needs" is for less government interference and more competition among health insurers, some of which may finally wise up and realize – it's at least as good of a business decision to reimburse chiropractors a relatively small amount as it is to cut checks for surgeries that cost big money.

But ultimately, that's the decision of insurers, not governments.

A Clinton-Bush matchup in 2016?

Tired of politics 2012? How about politics 2016?

I know. I know. It makes me shudder, too. But you should know that most of the politicos in Washington are convinced Hillary Rodham Clinton will run for president in four years.

There is a ton of evidence.

She has insisted that she will not serve as secretary of state for a full second term if President Barack Obama is re-elected. That will free her up to de-rust her "Hillary 2008" machinery and start running again.

She let it be known she did not want the soon-to-be-vacant job of head of the World Bank.

She has flatly squelched the idea she would replace Vice President Joe Biden on the Democratic ticket this year.

The extraordinary fundraiser for the Clintons, Terry McAuliffe, has been biding his time, not raking in the huge bucks for Obama this time as many expected, leading to the notion he is readying a campaign for Hillary Clinton.

She is experimenting with yet another longer, younger-looking hairstyle. (She had 36 while first lady.)

She wins praise from Republicans and Democrats alike for doing a good job as the nation's top diplomat.

Many think America is finally ready for a woman president, particularly an experienced one who will be just 69 in 2016 and still excites like a rock star.

There are legions of women eager for her to run, from her successor in the Senate, Kirsten Gillibrand, to the incomparable actress Meryl Streep. If Clinton runs, she would be the instant front-runner. Ed Rollins, the Republican political consultant who briefly ran Michele Bachmann's unsuccessful bid to be the first female president, says he is convinced Clinton will run and that she could very likely win.

Most decisively, Clinton has put the full force of the State Department behind a new search to find out what happened to famed aviator Amelia Earhart, who disappeared over the South Pacific 75 years ago.

Now this is really cool stuff. What a credential finding Earhart's plane would be! Earhart remains a fascinating mystery to millions, especially women. Clinton herself was inspired by the Earhart story as a young teen to write NASA asking if she could join the space program. She was told it did not accept females.

A new underwater search for Earhart's long-missing plane is being advised by U.S. oceanographer Bob Ballard, who found the wreckage of the Titanic. This summer, researchers from The International Group for Historic Aircraft Recovery, led by its founder, Ric Gillespie, hope to find her plane based on a picture taken in 1937 by a British soldier. The photo shows what appears to be part of an airplane like Earhart's in the ocean off a remote island in the Pacific nation of Kiribati. Gillespie believes Earhart and her navigator, Fred Noonan, survived a crash but died on the nearby uninhabited island.

Announcing her backing of the project to find out once and for all what happened to Earhart and Noonan, Clinton said: "She gave people hope and she inspired them to dream bigger and bolder. When she took off on that historic journey, she carried the aspirations of our entire country with her."

Clinton herself has said she is out of politics, leading to the expectation she will go to work with her husband on his foundation. But many believe a woman with her ambition, skills and work ethic would find it hard to turn down a chance to be the nation's first woman president.

Now here's the weird part. A lot of Republicans think Jeb Bush, the former GOP governor of Florida who finally but tepidly endorsed Mitt Romney, will be the front-runner for the Republican nominee for president in 2016 if Obama wins re-election.

The nation has had 24 years of a Bush or a Clinton as president or vice president. That could increase to 28 or more if a Bush or a Clinton wins in 2016.

Everything old is new again.

DEAR ABBY

Doubling up at cemetery makes room for husband's two wives

Dear Abby: Years ago I lost my beautiful wife. We had been married for more than 30 years. I bought a plot at the cemetery for both of us, and she's buried there now.

I have since remarried and have been blessed with another wonderful wife. There are no spaces left next to the existing plot, although I would like to be placed between both my wives when the time comes. Any recommendations? — Mr. In-Between

■ Dear Mr. In-Between: You have a couple of options. One would be to ask if your cemetery permits "double-depth" burials, in which one vault is placed on top of another. Or, if you wish, upon your demise you could choose cremation for yourself and have your ashes divided and placed with both wives.

I discussed your question with a wonderful lady, Lisa Carlson, executive director of the Funeral Ethics Organization. She's a mine of commonsense information on the subject of death and funerals — a subject many people find difficult to discuss.

Lisa reminded me years ago, funerals were handled at home and by the community, and children grew up understanding what would happen when a death occurred. However, as we turned death over to funeral directors, much of that common knowledge has been lost.

Readers, the Funeral Ethics Organization publishes free, state-specific pamphlets on the subject of funeral consumer rights. To download one for your state, visit its website, funeralethics.org. EARLY MARRIAGE TROUBLE. Dear Abby: I recently married my boyfriend of five years. Our marriage is only a few months old, and we're not happy. My husband is sweet, but he is absolutely the world's worst communicator. He's an introvert and has a "whatever" attitude about everything. He tells me he can't put his feelings into words. So how can we fix any of our problems?

We also constantly fight about our sex life. I'd appreciate it at least weekly. He doesn't care if we do "it" or not. I have voiced my concern about our sex life, but it doesn't seem to help. I feel rejected and hurt, and I crave this attention from my husband. I'm an affectionate and attractive young woman — so what gives? — Need Attention in Dallas

■ Dear Needs Attention: Was your husband this way during the five years you were together before the wedding? If he was, you shouldn't have gone through with it because people don't magically change after a trip to the altar.

If he was passionate, attentive and verbal but now has withdrawn, ask him a simple question: "Do you still want to be married to me?" If he can't answer that one, it's time to ask yourself an important question: "Am I better off with him or not?" If the answer is no, accept the fact that it's time to end the marriage.

John hasn't told his parents the good news

Dr. Wallace: I'm 17 and pregnant. My boyfriend, and the father of the baby, is 18 and a high-school senior. I'm also a senior, but attending a "special school" until after the baby is here.

Kirk and I care for each other, but we have no plans of getting married in the near future. I plan to keep the baby, and my mother will care for him (I know it's a boy) while I'm in school. Kirk wanted me to get an abortion, but when I told him it was against my religion, he dropped the issue and said he would be an active, loving father for our son. I'm due to have the baby in seven weeks.

The only problem is Kirk has not told his parents they are about to become grandparents. I know Kirk does not want his parents to know because they are in the social set, and it would not make them happy. I know for sure his mother would "flip" if someone called her Grandma.

My mother feels it's important that Kirk's parents know Kirk is soon to become a father, and she wants to call his mother and tell her the good news. Please give me your opinion. — Nameless, Oklahoma City, Okla.

■ Nameless: Kirk's parents must be told, but your mother is not the one to be the messenger of good news. Arrange a visit with Kirk and plan a day soon when you and he can, together, share the good news with his parents in their home. If Kirk refuses, then visit them with your parents.

ROBERT WALLACE

MY BOYFRIEND ONLY HAD ONE BEER. Dr. Wallace: My boyfriend was involved in a minor accident taking me home from a holiday party. When the police came, they gave Seth a ticket because they smelled alcohol on his breath. He did have a beer about a half-hour before we left the party but that is all the booze he had the entire party. Seth was given a Breathalyzer test, and he passed it. Still, he was given a ticket for reckless driving. That was much better than a drunk driving ticket.

Now my parents are forbidding me to go out with Seth again, and I don't think that's fair. After all, the Breathalyzer test proved he was a capable and a legal driver. Please tell me how I can convince my parents to change their minds. — Nameless, Lincoln, Neb.

■ Nameless: Drinking and driving don't mix. A person who has had even one alcoholic drink should wait at least one hour before driving. Better yet, he should not drive at all. A motor vehicle is a powerful force, especially when traveling 60 to 70 miles per hour. Drivers who make the wrong split-second decision can cause accidents. Your parents made the right decision.

RADCLIFF WOMAN'S CLUB HOSTS LIBRARY CELEBRATION

The Radcliff Woman's Club helped the Hardin County Public Library, North Branch in Radcliff turn a new page March 12 by hosting its grand re-opening reception.

As chairwoman of the reception committee, Emma Day organized the club's participation. Members who brought refreshments or helped to welcome guests were Pat Nuccitelli, Becky Brecht, Yvonne High, Mary Agnes Sears, Maria Batistoni, Sheila Enyart, Vada Johnson, Marilyn Williams, Barbara Proffitt, Donna Broadway and Emma Rosenkrantz. The event drew such a crowd that member Anne Aubrey attempted to attend, but had to leave after being unable to find a place to park.

The open house was held in the afternoon so children could attend. Of special interest to the children was a story hour, presented during the reception by library worker Andrea McKnight. Dressed as The Cat in the Hat, she interacted with the children as they sang, did artwork and read.

Library Director Rene Hutcheson recognized many of those who made the renovation possible including Hardin County Judge-Executive Harry Berry, Crepps Construction, Louis Lawson and the county inmate pro-

Lawsuits bring scrutiny to TBN

The Associated Press

COSTA MESA, Calif. — Televangelists Paul and Jan Crouch have faced plenty of mountains building their religious broadcast empire — among them allegations of a homosexual tryst and a prolonged battle with the Federal Communications Commission — but the most recent attack on the founders of Trinity Broadcasting Network comes from their own flesh and blood.

Their granddaughter, Brittany Koper, recently filed court papers that include allegations of $50 million in financial she-nanigans at the world's largest Christian broadcasting network. Her suit was followed by another from a Koper in-law, who detailed opulent spending at the network on items such as private jets, mansions in California, Tennessee and Florida and a $100,000 mobile home for Jan Crouch's dogs.

■ NBC has smashing news for fans of "Smash."

The network said Thursday its musical drama series has been picked up for a second season.

"Smash" is a much-heralded blend of backstage procedural and song-and-dance numbers. It debuted last month. It is not a ratings smash but has won critical praise and a healthy-size audience averaging 7.7 million viewers.

Series stars include Debra Messing, Anjelica Huston and Katharine McPhee as players in the unrelenting world of Broadway theater.

■ The party is on hold for The Situation. The "Jersey Shore" cast member is getting treatment for prescription medication use.

Mike Sorrentino said he's voluntarily seeking to "take control" of medication he was taking to deal with exhaustion.

Wedding gown care

Dear Heloise: I have an antique, handmade wedding dress that needs to be cleaned. Because there are no tags, what would you suggest I wash it in? It looks like mostly lace, sheer and taffeta. — Rhonda, via email

■ Rhonda, how lucky you are. Because you don't know what all the materials are, your best bet is to take it to a professional dry cleaner who has experience with heirloom garments and understands antique materials. I'd hesitate to try to "wash" it, especially because there are different types of materials.

There probably are several cleaners in your area who can take care of it and check for needed repairs.

Be sure to store your gown in a cool, dry place. Periodically, check the garment and refold with a different crease so one place doesn't wear and weaken.

CORD CLARITY. Dear Heloise: I always am mixing up the cords to my computer and un-

HINTS FROM HELOISE

plugging things I don't mean to. I take the square, plastic package closures from bread, label them and place them on the cords near the power strip. I now no longer have to search to try to figure out which cord is which. — A Reader, via email

TRAVEL HINT. Dear Readers: As a fan of homemade dressings, store-bought vinaigrettes just aren't the same.

When traveling by RV or going to a picnic or other outing, the glass containers may not survive the trip. Here's a "neat" hint: Pourer necks such as those on wine bottles also can fit in small or large plastic soda bottles. Put the dressings in a plastic bottle, then use the pourer when it is time to dress the salad. You also can put oil in one and vinegar in the other.

PICTURE THIS. Dear Heloise: Here are some hints for taking better photographs:

■ Be on eye level or higher with human subjects.

■ For under-the-shade outdoor pictures, use a flash, if necessary.

■ For indoor portraits, shoot several pictures so you can experiment by using different lights, flash or no flash.

■ When using a flash, make sure there is no mirror or glass door/window in the background. The flash will bounce off it. — Winnie R., via email

SPACE SAVER. Dear Heloise: I use a shoe bag on the back of the bathroom door to store all kinds of things. It holds deodorant, curling irons, blow-dryers, shampoo, etc. The bathroom is very small, with almost no storage space, and the shoe bag works great. — L.C., via email

White Mills Camp Board honors members

During a March 11 appreciation dinner for contributors and supporters, White Mills Christian Camp honored three outgoing board members and a 10-year employee.

Leonard Link, who recently completed nine years as board chairman, was recognized. A member of White Mills Christian Church, he served on the camp board since 1984. During Link's tenure as chairman, the camp set an attendance record of 1,511 and built a retreat center, new pool and pool house, pond and gazebo.

James Jeffries, new board chairman, also recognized two other outgoing board members. Thanks were expressed to Morris Hardwick, who served 23 years, and David Sandefur, who served 14 years.

The board presented a plaque to Louis Bauer, who completed 10 years of service as facility manager. His wife, Bobbie, also was recognized for volunteer labor around the camp.

The Christian service camp has operated at White Mills since 1949. In addition to faith-based summer programming for children, the facility offers wilderness camp settings, programming for the disabled and handicapped and retreats and church programs throughout the year.

Methodist-built chapel likely to be razed after storm

The Associated Press

A northern Kentucky chapel, built as a Methodist church 156 years ago, will likely be torn down after a storm wrecked it.

The building is known as Wesley Chapel and it belongs to a board that oversees a cemetery on the same property.

Kenny Fossitt, a board member, said the damage may prove too expensive to repair.

About 400 graves around the chapel in Campbell County date to the early 1800s. It was built with two front entrance doors - one for men and the other for women.

The congregation that used the building closed it in 1993. It was badly damaged in a March 2 storm.

Kindness

In St. Paul's inventory of the fruit of the spirit, in the fifth chapter of Galatians, we find kindness, the translation of the Greek word "chrestotes." The Greek word "chrestotes" has the connotation of goodness, and not just goodness as a quality, but goodness as expressed in actions or deeds. The person who exemplifies this type of kindness will be a genuinely good person, expressing their goodness by acting in ways that are gentle, patient and self-controlled. The person who is kind in this sense will naturally put others at ease because they can be more relaxed, knowing that this person will be kind and gentle. We do well to remember that when St. Paul speaks of the "fruit of the spirit," that fruit is singular, not plural. If we are truly walking by the spirit, we will possess all of these virtues. This surely does not mean that we won't struggle, perhaps with some more than others, but rather that we should strive for the kind of overarching goodness or kindness that makes us a thoroughly good person. And, not just good in this or that respect, but good across the board. Of course, no one is perfect, but by striving to be kind and good in all of our dealings, both at work and at home, and with our friends as well as our adversaries, we will be well on our way to perfecting our character and becoming more godlike.

Put on then, as God's Chosen ones, holy and beloved, compassion, kindness, lowliness, meekness and patience.

McLAUGHLIN AND THE BLOWFISH

E'town artist inspired by Japanese marketing

By BECCA OWSLEY

bowsley@thenewsenterprise.com

Dick McLaughlin is an artist inspired by color and the images he discovers emerging from the canvas as he paints.

Originally from Massachusetts, coastal waves and sunsets inspired some of his landscape and seascape work, he said. For five years he used pastel paints, but the dust bothered him so he switched to oil painting.

He met his wife, Verna, in Boston in a pottery class. Along with painting, McLaughlin also enjoys sculpting, writing poetry and photography.

Vera is from Elizabethtown and the couple later moved back to the area to care for her parents, McLaughlin said, quick to add praise for Vera's talents, especially her culinary skills.

In 2003, he took a trip to Japan that changed his painting pallet. He was influenced by the colors in Japanese marketing campaigns. He began working with bright colors and created a line of Fugu paintings.

The Fugu are puffer or blowfish, McLaughlin said. Their spiky bodies fill up with water as a defense mechanism so they cannot be swallowed. He said they inflate when they are anxious, which is about half the time because something's usually trying to eat them.

Although they are toxic, the Japanese love to eat them after they prepared by a specially trained chef, McLaughlin said.

After his trip he began a series of paintings featuring the Fugu. He has T-shirts and a page on Facebook promoting the Fugu World Tour. He suggests people buy the shirts then post photos taken in the shirts around the world. He has pictures from the Grand Canyon, Las Vegas, Indonesia, Ethiopia and most of Europe.

He would love to tour his artwork around the world but that's too expensive, so he created the Fugu World Tour T-shirt instead.

McLaughlin got the world tour idea from the Western Kentucky University towel that alumni take around the world. He's hoping to somehow geotag the photos on Facebook someday to map where shirts have been.

NEAL CARDIN/The News-Enterprise

Artist Dick McLaughlin holds one of the T-shirts he and his wife, Vera, created promoting the Fugu World Tour.

He paints each Fugu's eyes and mouth last so he never knows what personality will develop until he is near the end of a painting. Each one is named based on their colors and personality. "Orange Peek-a-boo," "Enigmatic Fugu," "Three Green Fugu Lost In Space," "Fugu with Pink Tiny Dancers," and "Fugu with Dust Bunny Fish" are just a few of the names of the paintings.

He recently had a show in downtown Elizabethtown with fellow artist Jon O'Brien called "The Fugu and the Owl: 'Here's Looking at You'." O'Brien's work consisted of a series of owl paintings.

He's now working on a new art show focusing on how light hits the surface of water.

McLaughlin likes abstract expressionism and said some of his work looks like covers for science fiction books, a genre he liked as a kid.

During the week, McLaughlin works at the University of Louisville as an admissions counselor, recruiting students to study at U of L and work at UPS. He loves his job and traveling to college fairs and conferences.

McLaughlin has made many friends at the events. He often takes his harmonica to have jam sessions with fellow admission counselors.

For now he does most of his painting on the weekends but said when he retires his studio will see a lot of action.

He hopes to host a participatory art festival some day in Elizabethtown called Fugu-fest where people can make their own Fugus. Events like this give a social aspect to art, which is often a solitary life, he said.

He might include a walk or run with the festival to raise money for a cause.

HMH: Toadvine initially was drawn to family medicine

Ultimately, he decided on medicine, he said, because he felt he could make a significant difference in the lives of others.

Toadvine felt drawn to family medicine because of the intimate role played in the lives of patients, he said, but he has practiced everything from emergency medicine and home visits to urgent care and nursing home medicine.

He has served as medical director of Corbin and Barbourville Family Health Centers and as president and CEO of Barbourville Family Health Center.

Toadvine also served several years in the Baptist Healthcare System as chief medical officer of Baptist Regional Medical Center in Corbin. It was in Corbin where he first was asked to take on the role of chief medical officer. He initially was hesitant but said the experience broadened his knowledge of health care.

He now is outgoing regional chief medical officer of Mountain States Health Alliance, a 13-hospital, $1 billion annual net revenue health-care system based in Johnson City, Tenn.

In that role, Toadvine served as chief medical officer for Virginia operations, overseeing five Virginia hospitals under the Mountain States Health Alliance umbrella.

Toadvine said his latest role opened his eyes to the work needed to build an integrated network of hospitals in a health-care system. That experience, he said, should translate well to HMH because he has spent the past several years working closely with physicians and is accustomed to larger hospitals and systems with multiple departments.

But Toadvine also recognizes some hurdles.

"The challenge for health care is to provide high-quality care at a lowered cost," he said.

Toadvine said hospitals sometimes overutilize services, but it is imperative to maintain stellar care at an affordable rate.

Johnson said Toadvine is highly experienced and knowledgeable and is an excellent fit for HMH. Johnson said Toadvine was the only applicant for the job as HMH used a closed process to find Prather's replacement.

Toadvine said he is fortunate to take a job where Prather had built a solid framework and executed great decision making. In addition to building on Prather's work, Toadvine said he has an opportunity to work with Dr. Kent Collard, who was promoted to interim chief medical officer in Prather's absence, and glean information from him as he settles in.

"I'm in a really ideal situation," he said.

Ohio bus driver fired after choking student

Attack captured on video

The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio — A bus driver accused of choking a third-grade special-needs student as she was driving the girl home from school in an encounter captured on video was fired by the school district on Thursday, a district spokesman said.

The Columbus City Schools district fired driver Laura Roberson on a district charge of malfeasance for inappropriate contact with a student, district spokesman Jeff Warner said.

Warner said a surveillance system recorded Roberson on Tuesday afternoon while she drove the 9-year-old student from school on Tuesday. He was not sure how many other children were on the district bus used to transport special-needs children and did not know whether the girl required treatment for any injuries.

Roberson, 59, of Canal Winchester, did not immediately return calls to her home.

The district had suspended Roberson without pay pending the Thursday hearing that resulted in her dismissal. No other details of the hearing were immediately released.

Warner says it is not clear what led to the encounter but he said the recording showed that Roberson's actions "were not physically appropriate."

He said that the girl's foster mother reported the matter to police and the school, but Warner did not know if criminal charges had been filed.

A police report did not list Roberson as a suspect, The Columbus Dispatch has reported. The report said no weapons were used, but that the student was injured.

Roberson had been a driver for the 50,000-student district since 1984, and the only other incident reported against her was backing into a stop sign in 2009.

PUPPIES: Youngest dogs display few ill effects tions and without water, were being sold.

The investigation is ongoing.

Joyce McCarthy said Thursday at her home she did not want to comment without an attorney present.

The dogs are being held as evidence and aren't available for adoption at this time. Most are at the Hardin County Animal Control shelter on Nicholas Street in Elizabethtown.

Animal Control Supervisor Jerry Foley said he can't comment on an ongoing investigation or the state of the rescued dogs.

A veterinarian checked each dog Wednesday upon recovery and treated any that needed it. The shelter's veterinarian examined the animals Thursday, Foley said.

"These things normally take a while," he said. "They have to go through the court system, and that can move pretty slowly. In the meantime, we'll continue to house the animals and give them any medical treatment they need and provide them with food, shelter and love."

Nursing dogs and puppies too young to be housed with the shelter's general population are at Pet Protection Inc. on West Dixie Avenue in Elizabethtown.

Pet Protection President Gayle Johnson said plans are being made to spay or neuter all the recovered dogs and have them treated for worms if the McCarthys aren't again granted custody of the animals.

It is possible Pet Protection will celebrate the beginning of its spay and neuter service by treating some of the dogs rescued Wednesday, she said.

Johnson's daughter, Wendy Johnson, was among the volunteers who dogs. The puppies, she said, seem unaffected. "They just don't understand that there is anything bad in the world," she said.

retrieved the dogs from the McCarthys' mobile home, where officials said the animals were kept in two rooms built onto the back of the home.

She said the dogs volunteers had to chase were terrified.

"This is my first of this kind of thing," Wendy Johnson said. "I can live the rest of my life without doing it again. It was overwhelming."

Pet Protection volunteers wiped off puppies too young to be bathed and washed mother dogs that were in the most unhygienic condition, some with feces matted in their coats. Volunteers plan to leave the rest alone until the dogs acclimate to their new situation, Wendy Johnson said.

All but one of the seven nursing mothers seem skittish and vigilant of their puppies. They cower or become stiff when volunteers move them to clean their cages, she said.

"I guess it's fight or flight," she said.

Wendy Johnson said one mother and litter might have hydrocephalus, which means water in the brain. Volunteers also are concerned about the dogs' unhealthy-looking feces.

One adult dog, on which the backbone and ribs were visible, had to have her food removed after a while because volunteers feared she would eat too much and become sick when she received her first meal there, Wendy Johnson said.

A few puppies wrestled rambunctiously in their cages while others nursed or slept.

Stocks lower on worries over China slowdown

By PALLAVI GOGOI
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — Signs that China's economy is weakening and Europe is slowing hurt U.S. stock prices.

Oil prices dropped 2.4 percent to their lowest level in a week after the reports of a possible global slowdown. That hurt oil stocks: Alpha Natural Resources, Consol Energy, Cabot Oil & Gas Corp. and Halliburton were all down 4 percent.

The disconcerting news from overseas Thursday overshadowed reports showing the U.S. economy is gaining momentum.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 74 points to 13,050 at mid-afternoon Thursday. The Standard & Poor's 500 index fell 10 points to 1,392, while the Nasdaq composite fell 14 points to 3,061.

Nine out of 10 sectors fell in the S&P 500, led by energy and materials.

China has recently released a string of worrisome reports, the latest on Thursday, signaling that its manufacturing sector is contracting. A manufacturing index compiled by HSBC fell to 48.1 in March from 49.6 in February. Figures below 50 indicate that manufacturing is contracting.

That's a negative sign because growth in China has played a key role in shoring up the global economy since the financial crisis of 2008.

U.S. OKs Egypt aid despite Congress' concern

By DONNA CASSATA
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Obama administration told Congress on Thursday it will waive democracy requirements to release up to $1.5 billion in aid to Egypt despite concerns that the country is backsliding on commitments it made to democratic governance and rule of law.

U.S. officials and lawmakers said Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton has determined that it was in the U.S. national interest to allow $1.3 billion in military assistance to flow. She also certified that Egypt is meeting its obligations to the Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty, which frees up an additional $200 million in economic aid, they said.

A senior State Department official said the decisions "reflect our overarching goal: to maintain our strategic partnership with an Egypt made stronger and more stable by a successful transition to democracy."

The official spoke on condition of anonymity because congressional notifications are not complete. Clinton will sign the waiver on Friday, the official said.

U.S. officials had said last week that Clinton was poised to grant the waiver because she could not certify that Egypt was in full compliance with the democracy requirements of law.

Sen. Patrick Leahy, who wrote the legislation imposing conditions on the aid, said he was "dissatisfied" by the decision.

"I know Secretary Clinton wants the democratic transition in Egypt to succeed, but by waiving the conditions we send a contradictory message. The Egyptian military should be defending fundamental freedoms and the rule of law, not harassing and arresting those who are working for democracy," the Democrat said.

the moon walk.

During the talk, docents showed photos and models of shuttles and vehicles, and equipment displayed in the museum, such as a heat shield from the Apollo 11 mission.

Student Tristan Collins expressed fascination about space and looked forward to Thursday's video conference.

"I was really excited about learning more about it," Collins said.

Collins and student Amber Mercer were intrigued by the phases of a rocket launch, during which a rocket loses a number of pieces as it climbs through the atmosphere.

"And it didn't explode," Mercer noted with amazement.

Gifted and Talented teacher Carla D'Alessio has been working on bringing a video conference opportunity to students for about a year. She wanted students to have some kind of "electronic field trip," and she and another faculty member worked to set up a session with the Smithsonian. The museum offered a video conference on NASA and the teachers deemed it suitable for their students.

She wanted students to have an opportunity to see a place they physically might not be able to visit.

"I want to make their learning come alive," she said.

A possible halt to Afghanistan drawdown

U.S. Afghan commander prefers robust force in 2013

By DONNA CASSATA
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The top commander in Afghanistan said Thursday he prefers a significant American force of 68,000 to combat insurgents in 2013, signaling a potential halt in the drawdown and complicating any effort by President Barack Obama to speed up troop withdrawals after more than a decade of war.

Marine Gen. John Allen insisted he will hold off on a recommendation on the pace of further reductions until after the 23,000-member surge forces leaves Afghanistan by the end of September. But in his most explicit comments in two days of congressional testimony, Allen indicated that he envisions no other withdrawals beyond that cut this year and expressed his preference for next year.

"My opinion is that we will need significant combat power in 2013," Allen told the Senate Armed Services Committee.

"Like 68,000?" asked Sen. John McCain, the panel's top Republican.

"Sixty-eight thousand is a good going-in number, sir, but I owe the president some analysis on that," Allen replied.

Obama faces increasing political and public pressure to accelerate the timetable for withdrawing forces more than a decade after President George W. Bush dispatched the military to respond to the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks. Recent incidents — blamed on Americans — have undermined the fragile U.S.-Afghanistan relationship. The burnings of Qurans and a shooting spree that left 17 Afghan civilians dead, including women and children, have stoked the anti-American rage.

Obama has said he wants to "responsibly wind down this war," as the United States and other members of the coalition shift the responsibility for security to Afghan forces. Within the White House, officials have discussed the size of the force next year with potential withdrawal numbers and scenarios, including the possibility of bringing home additional forces in the final months of 2012.

But Allen made it clear that the last three months of the year will be his time to assess the force and the threat — with an announcement likely after Election Day.

He defended that approach under questioning from Armed Services Committee Chairman Carl Levin, D-Mich., who is pressing for the United States to maintain a steady pace for withdrawal in 2013.

"I think it's exactly the best way ultimately to identify the state of the insurgency, the state of the full ISAF force, to include the U.S. force, but also to evaluate the operational requirements for '13 in order to make a comprehensive recommendation," Allen told the committee.

The current plan calls for the U.S. to withdraw its surge force of 23,000 American troops by the end of September, with a complete drawdown by December 2014. Currently the United States has 90,000 troops in the region.

White House spokesman Jay Carney, questioned about Allen's comment, said Obama remains committed to steadily drawing down U.S. combat troops as security responsibilities shift to Afghan forces. A specific timetable and the size of the withdrawal will be decided after the surge forces leave.

"What General Allen was referring to is that 68,000 troops that remain after withdrawal of the surge forces is a good number going in" to the post-surge withdrawal period, Carney said aboard Air Force One as the president traveled to Ohio.

Capt. John Kirby, a spokesman for Allen, said in a statement that "there is absolutely no daylight between General Allen and the commander in chief about the need to assess the state of the insurgency in the fall before making any decisions about future force levels. General Allen has not committed himself to any specific number of troops at any particular point in 2013."

Allen faced repeated questions from lawmakers about a potential reduction of Afghan security forces, from the stated goal of 352,000 to 240,000 by 2017. Several senators challenged that step and whether it was driven by budget concerns.

"Given the fact that transition to a strong Afghan security force is the key to success of this mission, why would it be — why does it make sense to talk about reducing the size of the Afghan army by a third?" Levin asked.

Allen said that was a target number for 2017 and the military was weighing what the number should be based on the threat. The cost of an Afghan force of 352,000 would be $4.5 billion.

"There are a number of different options, and we're continuing to evaluate what those options might be, all the way from the current force, the 352,000 force, which will continue to exist for several years once we have fielded it, down to a force that was smaller than 230,000, which probably doesn't have the right capabilities, the right combination of capabilities," Allen said.

Bulldogs knocked off by Camels

By NATHANIEL BRYAN
nbryan@thenewsenterprise.com

LOUISVILLE — The John Hardin Bulldogs might as well have been the John Hardin Underdogs entering boys' team bracket play Thursday at the inaugural Ebonite International/KHSAA State Bowling Championships at Executive Strike and Spare.

The 2nd (Mid Kentucky) Region Tournament runner-ups entered the tournament seeded last in the individual seeding game and last in baker average based on the results of the eight region tournaments.

Against another level of competition, the Bulldogs stepped up their play — besting their seeding total from last week by 45 pins and crushing their season best in baker. After earning the No. 15 seed in the 16-team single-elimination tournament, the Bulldogs' season came to a close with a 3-1 loss to the second-seeded Campbell County Camels.

"Today was tiring. We had to wake up at four, but it was a good experience," said junior Sean Diezman, who had the Bulldogs' best qualifying game with a 205. "I'm glad we finished strong with this team and I'm glad we made it here."

Rounding out the Bulldogs' qualifying scores were juniors Josh Proctor (186) and Lucas Ward (166), senior Anthony Murphy (149), freshman Aaron Gunter (147) and senior Dru Inman (137). Scores from junior Alex Humes (142) and senior Lucas Ray (118) were dropped.

Cardinals down top-seeded Spartans, 57-44

By JOHN MARSHALL
AP Basketball Writer

PHOENIX — Louisville figured its game against Michigan State to be low-scoring, a natural expectation with two of the nation's best defenses butting heads.

The Cardinals had one big advantage: Gorgui Dieng.

Dominating inside, Dieng blocked seven shots and altered several others to anchor a stifling defense that helped Louisville knock off top-seeded Michigan State, 57-44 Thursday night in the West Regional semifinals.

"He was very disruptive," Michigan State's Draymond Green said. "We're not going to back down from anyone. We took it at him. He pulled off some great blocked shots. That's what he does. That's his strength."

The Cardinals (29-9) relied on 3-point shooting in the first half and moved inside in the second to befuddle the Spartans.

Their defense gave Michigan State fits all night.

Instead of trapping like it normally does, Louisville played a bait-and-switch game with the Spartans and Green, their multitalented forward. The idea was to jump out on screens and to make

Lady Trojans fall in first round of State

By NATHANIEL BRYAN
nbryan@thenewsenterprise.com

LOUISVILLE — The North Hardin Lady Trojans' best still wasn't enough to beat the state's almost best.

Despite vastly improved seeding totals and baker averages from last week's region tournament, the first-year program from Radcliff couldn't avoid a straight-game loss to the fifth-seeded Lexington Bryan Station Lady Defenders in the first round of the inaugural Ebonite International/KHSAA State Bowling Championships at Executive Strike and Spare.

North Hardin averaged 135.73 pins in its 11 region tournament bakers at Campbellsville's Phillips Lanes and had little problem reaching that mark Thursday in its 160-135, 182-168, 171-137 loss to the eventual state runner-ups.

"Since I had never been to State before, I didn't know what to expect, but it was an overall good experience even though I'm disappointed in the outcome," said North Hardin senior

Meade County. "I mean, we bowled our average in the bakers, but it just wasn't good enough."

No lack of tradition when Kentucky meets Hoosiers

By PAUL NEWBERRY
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA — At Kentucky, the bar is set a lot higher than most places.

National championship or bust.

"It's Kentucky," coach John Calipari said. "Do you expect anything else?"

Tonight, the Wildcats will be matched against one of the few college basketball programs that can give them a run for passion and tradition. If Kentucky brings up Adolph Rupp, Indiana can quickly counter with Bob Knight. Few fans get as worked up about the game as those in the Bluegrass State — unless you happen be among those hoops-crazy Hoosiers.

"There's always been a special aura around and about Indiana to me," said coach Tom Crean, "and I would say the same thing about Kentucky."

With a dozen national titles between them (seven for the Wildcats, five for Indiana), this is about as good as it gets without actually being at the Final Four. Throw in some enticing subplots — from Crean leading a remarkable turnaround in Bloomington after the storied program fell on hard times, to Calipari positioning Kentucky for another title run with his latest one-and-likely-done dream team — and there's no doubt the Georgia Dome will be rockin' for this South Regional semifinal.

John Hardin tops LaRue

By JOSH CLAYWELL
jclaywell@thenewsenterprise.com

John Hardin's two youngest players came through in the clutch Thursday.

Seventh-grade outfielder Ally Furnish threw out a runner at the plate in the sixth inning and seventh-grade second baseman Kayla Reed delivered the game-winning hit in the bottom of the eighth as host John Hardin knocked off LaRue County, 6-5 to snap a three-game losing streak.

With two outs, Reed hit a bloop single between second and short-stop. LaRue County senior Megan Smith fielded the ball and threw to first, but Reed beat the throw. That allowed senior pinch-runner Macy Higdon to score from second base and give John Hardin (1-3) the walkoff win.

"I think it was just how it worked out," Reed said. "We did really well on that play. It felt amazing to get that hit and win the

Green Wave hand North first loss of the season

By JOHN GROTH
jgroth@thenewsenterprise.com

Too uptight after their first three games, the Meade County Green Wave got a little squirrely.

They finally relaxed, had fun and acted like kids again.

Garrett Ledford's wicked curveball helped the three-time defending 11th District Tournament champions curtail their early-season losing skid, too.

A senior pitcher, Ledford struck out nine batters in six innings Thursday and added some offense with a run-scoring single to guide Meade County to a 6-1 win over visiting North Hardin.

With its veterans, especially Ledford, paving the way, Meade County (2-2) ended its two-game losing streak.

Senior catcher Brady Smith had two RBIs, senior Bo Wilson scored two runs in the first four innings, junior Jake Wilson hit a solo home run and senior Daniel Kaiser added an RBI single in the sixth inning to cap the win.

Meanwhile, Ledford allowed just three hits and an unearned run in his home debut.

"I knew we had to get this win. We'd lost two games in a row. We had to bear down and get it," Ledford said. "We've been really, really tense. We'd freeze up when hard ground balls would come up at us. We just learned to loosen up and be squirrely."

That's exactly what Clanton had hoped would happen

Hasselbeck understands Titans' chase of Manning

By TERESA M. WALKER
AP Sports Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Matt Hasselbeck understands why the Tennessee Titans tried to sign Peyton Manning and plans to move on, taking care of what he controls.

That includes building off his first season in Tennessee.

Hasselbeck made his first public comments since Manning chose Denver on a conference call Thursday from the NFL Players Association's annual meeting. He said he has a ton of respect for Manning and expected there would be interest in the four-time NFL MVP when Tennessee was reported as a possible suitor.

"I just sort of expected that because ... who he was in the state. I get it. It wasn't a shock to me," Hasselbeck said.

Hasselbeck said he has heard

Running back Michael Bush joins Bears

The Associated Press

LAKE FOREST, Ill. — Michael Bush is joining the Chicago Bears, perhaps to team with Matt Forte and give the team two hard and effective runners who can alternate punishing defense.

Or maybe in a more visible role should Forte hold out after he earlier was slapped with the franchise tag.

Bush played four seasons for the Oakland Raiders, gaining 2,642 yards (4.2 yards per carry) and scoring 21 touchdowns. The powerful 245-pound back had his most productive season in 2011, setting career highs in rushes (256), yards (977), touchdowns (seven), receptions (37) and yards receiving (418). He mostly was a backup to Darren McFadden but had nine starts last season when McFadden was injured.

"I was told that the rotation will be very good," Bush said in a conference call after signing a four-year deal the Chicago Tribune reported was worth $14 million, with $7 million guaranteed. "I think there are enough carries to go around."

that Manning might reach out to some of the quarterbacks at the teams he met with during his whirlwind free agency tour. That's not necessary for Hasselbeck.

"If the owner wants to make a change and pursue somebody in free agency, that could happen on any team at any time anywhere," Hasselbeck said. "I guess for me at the end of the day ... again I get it. I get it with the Peyton thing.

"I'm excited that I get a chance to finish what we started here, and I'm very confident in my abilities to get it done as a quarterback and so I think bottom line, we're just happy to get to stay in Nashville."

Hasselbeck said he went through a similar change himself a year ago when Seattle moved on without him. As a competitor, Hasselbeck said the reaction is to say he's got the situation handled. He said he and Jake Locker, Tennessee's quarterback of the future after being drafted eighth overall in 2011, talked while the Titans pursued Manning. But Hasselbeck refused to share any of those discussions.

The veteran quarterback was busy ferrying students to the Tennessee high school boys' basketball tournament while the Titans met with Manning at the team's headquarters and later flew to Knoxville where Manning worked out for coaches and officials.

After the union meetings in Florida, Hasselbeck said it will be time to get back to work in the off-season program that starts in mid-April.

"If I had to make the choice this year like I did last year, I still would choose Tennessee," Hasselbeck said. "I like what we have going here. I really like the offensive line, the skill guys are very talented. I like the coaching staff. I like the division that we're in."

"I like everything about it." A three-time Pro Bowler, Hasselbeck is coming off one of his best seasons in his career and one of Tennessee's best by a quarterback despite not having an off-season to learn a new offense. He threw for 3,571 yards and 18 touchdowns.

Chipper says this will be his final season

By PAUL NEWBERRY
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA — Flanked by his family, his former manager and a group of teammates he hates to leave behind, Chipper Jones choked up a bit and delivered the news that's been looming for years:

It's time to call it a career.

This time, he means it.

With his 40th birthday approaching and a long string of injuries slowing him down, Jones announced Thursday he will retire after one more season as the Atlanta Braves' third baseman.

"I have fulfilled everything," Jones said during a news conference at the team's spring training stadium in Kissimmee, Fla. "There's nothing left for me to do."

Jones, who has spent his entire 18-year career with Atlanta, actually planned to retire after the 2010 season, only to change his mind. As he battled leg issues this spring, he openly wondered if he'd be able to make it through the season.

So, he'll give it one more year with the Braves, then become a full-time dad to his three children.

"I just want to make it final," Jones said.

He praised the Braves organization, calling Bobby Cox "the greatest manager any of us will ever know," thanked team executives John Schuerholz and Frank Wren for building a perennial winner and fought back tears as he turned to his teammates.

"I've been thinking about this and the reason I stayed around is you guys," Jones said. "I played on teams where clubhouse cohesion wasn't there. That never happened with you guys."

Around baseball, Jones was praised for this long, consistent career, which included the NL MVP award in 1999, an NL batting title in 2008, seven All-Star games — and, quite possibly, will include an induction ceremony at Cooperstown.

He should be a first-ballot selection, according to Cox, who attended the news conference with the only other manager Jones will have in his big league career, current Braves skipper Fredi Gonzalez.

GOLF

Wi, Dufner share lead at Bay Hill

The Associated Press

Charlie Wi felt a lot better walking off the golf course compared with his last round.

So did Tiger Woods.

Coming off a final round at Innisbrook in which he made a 13 on one hole, Wi hit an 8-iron over the water to 6 feet for birdie on the 18th for a 6-under 66, giving him a share of the lead with Jason Dufner on Thursday in the Arnold Palmer Invitational.

It's the fourth time Dufner has been atop the leaderboard after a round during the Florida swing — except that none of those rounds have been Sunday.

The last time Woods was seen on the PGA Tour, he was being driven away in a golf cart after withdrawing in the middle of the final round at Doral with soreness and swelling in his left Achilles tendon.

Woods, a six-time champion at Bay Hill, shot a 69 without breaking a sweat, much less breaking any body parts. There was nothing particularly special about this round, except for a 30-foot birdie putt that swirled around the cup at the 15th, and a couple of three-putt bogeys that kept his score from being lower.

Phil Mickelson was all over the place, going from a bunker to a magnolia tree on his way to an unlikely par; hitting a tee shot out of bounds for double bogey; hitting into the water for another double bogey; and somehow escaping with a 73.

HASSAN II TROPHY. Ireland's Damien McGrane shot a 7-under 65 to take a two-stroke lead after the first round of the European Tour's Hassan II Trophy.

Spain's Alejandro Canizares was second at Golf du Palais Royal, the Robert Trent Jones Sr.-designed course that sits inside the walls of the Royal Palace of Agadir.

Serena wins opening match at Key Biscayne

By STEVEN WINE
AP Sports Writer

KEY BISCAIYNE, Fla. — Serena Williams looked right at home, and not just because her purple dress matched the color of the court.

Playing in her backyard tournament for the first time since 2009, the five-time champion beat wild card Zhang Shuai 6-2, 6-3 on Thursday at the Sony Ericsson Open.

The victory marked Williams' return to tournament tennis after a two-month absence. It was her first match at Key Biscayne since she lost to Victoria Azarenka in the final three years ago.

"I was really nervous out there," Williams said. "I haven't played here for so long, and I wanted to do well. My worst fear actually was as long as I don't hit a ball in the stands, I'll be good. I didn't do that today, so it worked out well for me."

Williams lives two hours up Interstate 95 in Palm Beach Gardens, Fla., with sister Venus, who won Wednesday playing her first singles match since August.

American Ryan Harrison, a wild card entry, rallied past Polito Starace 6-7 (6), 6-4, 6-4 and will next face two-time champion Roger Federer. The second-round match will be a gauge of progress for the 19-year-old Harrison, who is ranked 73rd but has yet to beat a top-10 player.

"He's very talented," Federer said, "and I'm sure he's going to be making his move up the rankings very easily this year and in the coming years. He has a big game."

Two-time champion Kim Clijsters won for the second day in a row, beating No. 14-seeded Julia Goerges 6-2, 7-5. No. 13 Jelena Jankovic lost her opening match to Mona Barthel 6-0, 6-3.

Reigning U.S. Open champion Samantha Stosur beat qualifier Valeria Savinykh 6-4, 6-0.

Health issues prevented Williams from playing at Key Biscayne in 2010 and 2011, and a left ankle injury has slowed her this year. Aside from two Fed Cup victories in February, she was playing for the first time since she lost in the fourth round at the Australian Open.

Williams, who received a first-round bye because she's seeded 10th, looked fit but rusty and endured some sloppy moments. At one point she froze in a pose behind the baseline, hands on her hips as she fumed after making a flurry of mistakes.

"I got a little frustrated," she said. "My frustration is more like a motivation frustration, so it helps me."

While her returns were erratic, she served six aces and lost only 7-of-34 points on her first serve.

Williams said she found her older sister's first-round victory inspiring. Venus was diagnosed last summer with a fatigue-causing autoimmune disease, and Serena has tried to help her sister adjust to a restricted diet by keeping unhealthy food out of the kitchen.

Best friends since childhood, the sisters continue to share a home as celebrity millionaire adults, and Serena laughed when asked about the arrangement.

"Yeah, we probably should have moved out a long time ago," she said. "Honestly, it's ridiculous now, like we have kind of held each other back."

"Hey, we're in for the long run," she added. "That's like my husband. We're always laughing together. You know, I tell her everything, so it's fun."

JOHN HARDIN: downs Lady Hawks in eight

“On the first or second pitch (to Croghan) I knew I was going to send Macy,” said John Hardin coach Corey Yates. “We needed to get her in scoring position so that (if we got) a ball through the infield we could get her home. Kayla, this year, has made two or three really good, clutch hits for us. I felt really good with her at the plate.

“She just was able to poke one right where she needed to in the infield not only to get her safely to first but to get Macy all the way home from second. It was an exciting play.”

While John Hardin celebrated the win, the Lady Hawks were left wondering what if.

After falling behind 5-1, LaRue County (1-3) tied it with a four-run rally in the sixth. Sophomores Courtney Johnson and Brigitte Skaggs each scored on wild pitches by John Hardin junior Kassie Hardin, and senior Bethany Skaggs and freshman Sierra Mullins each had run-scoring singles.

“It tells me that we have fight in us and that we don’t quit,” said second-year LaRue County coach Aaron Howell. “That says a lot about their character. Teams are defined by their character. I think they had great character. We'll chalk this up to a bad day. Give credit to John Hardin and to my cousin Corey. He did a great job calling the game, and they executed.”

LaRue County had a chance to take the lead in the eighth. Brigitte Skaggs led off with a single. Her courtesy runner, eighth-grader Jill Hughes, moved to second on a wild pitch and took third on a groundout. But Hughes was thrown out at the plate trying to score on another wild pitch.

Howell wasn't pleased with how his team ran the bases, but placed the blame on himself.

“Base-running is just as important as fielding and throwing and hitting,” Howell said. “But as the third-base coach, those mistakes ultimately fall on me. I'm taking the total blame for this loss. I'm more frustrated with myself than the young runners we had out there. We're a young team, but that's no excuse. They have to be well-coached and I didn't do my job.”

LaRue County lost its third straight, while the Lady Bulldogs had been held scoreless in each of their previous two games.

“We just had that one inning that we fell apart,” Yates said. “We just lost focus defensively, and we've been on them about that. That's what cost us the first three games of this year. We were able to regroup and stay with it. Kassie went out and kept us in the game. We were fortunate enough to get that hit at the end.

“I never felt comfortable because I could tell by the way they were swinging the bats that we were gonna have to weather another inning or two of them, especially with the top of their order, scoring some runs,” he added. “But we were able to make some big plays that kept them from really opening it up offensively.”

GREEN WAVE: rolls past North Hardin, 6-1

after Wednesday's practice and team meeting. He told them they just needed to be teenagers again and not put all this pressure on themselves.

With an experienced starting lineup filled with all but one overclassman, there are high expectations for the Green Wave to earn another district crown and contend for the 3rd Region title.

After a 16-0 five-inning season-opening win over Fort Knox, the Green Wave had dropped back-to-back games to Louisville DuPont Manual and Louisville Fairdale. It was an unexpected, rocky start.

Meanwhile, North Hardin (3-1) looked to be on a roll with its young group. Both had their streaks, good and bad, curbed.

Ledford was dominant, striking out five batters in the first three innings. He struck out the final two in the first inning and then three more in the third, sending senior Brady Patterson down swinging after allowing a double to junior Jordan Sanchez a batter before.

After throwing only a few first-inning curveballs, Ledford said he mixed it in a little more the rest of the way. It gave the Trojans issues, especially on a third strike. Four North Hardin batters struck out looking.

Trailing 4-0, North Hardin scored its only run in the sixth when Smith made an error with an overthrow of third base on a steal attempt with two outs and senior Andrew Boyles scored. But freshman Javier Echevarria ended the inning by striking out.

“We have to do a better job at the plate. Our approach with two strikes wasn't good. We watched some pitches go by we shouldn't have,” said North Hardin coach Ace Adcock. “With two strikes, you have to be able to give yourself another pitch to look at. ... We had a hard time doing that. He made some good pitches. He really did.”

Clanton acknowledged Ledford was on target.

“He was outstanding. We talked a lot about getting ahead in the count and no free bases,” Clanton said. “He wanted to go back out for the seventh. But he was at 80 pitches, which is five more than we wanted. That'll come later in the year, when he's more conditioned.”

CARDINALS: top Michigan State

the Spartans work on every possession and, hopefully, wear them out.

It worked, in large part because Dieng was in the back to clean things up.

Tent-pole thin when he arrived at Louisville, the Senegalese center worked hard on his body and his game, developing into the one player the Cardinals had to have on the floor during his sophomore season. When he got in foul trouble, Louisville labored, so one of the key parts of coach Rick Pitino's game plan was to make sure the Cardinals protected him.

They did and he protected the rim in return, getting five of his blocked shots in the second half to prevent Michigan State from mounting any kind of rally. The Cardinals move on to the West final against Marquette or Florida on Saturday.

“When we came here, we know (what) we're going to face,” said Dieng, who also had five points, nine rebounds and three steals while matching the school record for blocked shots in an NCAA Tournament game. “We knew we were going to come to a war. We need to be tougher than them to win this game.”

Michigan State (29-8) started slow and never got going against Louisville's amoebic defense.

The Spartans got shots they wanted and usually make, but couldn't get many to fall against Dieng or anyone else, shooting 28 percent while being outscored 20-14 inside by the leaner Cardinals.

Green had 13 points and 16 rebounds in his final game for Michigan State. Brandon Wood added 14 points for the Spartans, who were outscored 17-4 off the bench.

“They disrupted us a little bit and we didn't have enough guys who could play well,” Michigan State coach Tom Izzo said.

This sweet matchup of top programs featured two of college basketball's best short-preparation coaches.

Pitino has used his speed-the-opponent-up system to reach the Final Four five times, becoming the first coach to lead three different schools to the national semifinals. Once past the NCAA Tournament's first week, he's had a knack for guiding his team further along the bracket, going 10-0 in the regional semifinals.

Izzo has spent his 17 years at Michigan State building teams that can handle the rigors of the Big Ten or switch to greyhound mode when the opponent plays fast. He's been as consistent as any coach in the game, leading the Spartans to the Final Four six times, including the 2000 national title, and 10 trips to the regionals round the past 15 years.

Izzo played the right hand the last time these two basketball brains met, taking the Spartans to the 2009 Final Four after they found a way to break Louisville's pressure.

Pitino had something up his sleeve this time.

With Michigan State bogging the game down, the Cardinals struggled early, missing 12 of their first 13 shots. They snapped out of it by hitting 3s.

Russ Smith hit a pair, Jared Swopshire and Chris Smith each dropped one in and, even Dieng — 0-for-2 in his career previously — got one to go in.

Swopshire closed it out with a 3 from the corner to put the Cardinals up 23-18 at halftime. Louisville was 7-of-15 from the arc in the half, but got almost nothing inside, hitting 1-of-15 shots from 2-point range.

“Our game plan was to cut off the paint,” Izzo said. “I thought we did actually a very good job of that. And yet they hit some 3s.”

Louisville shifted gears to open the second half, getting two layups and a dunk to keep its cushion. Swopshire followed with an alley-oop to Siva for the point guard's first points, then stole the inbound pass to set up two free throws by Russ Smith that put the Cardinals up 35-25.

CHRIS CARLSON/The Associated Press

Louisville's Chane Behanan celebrates his team's 57-44 win over Michigan State in an NCAA Tournament West Regional semifinal Thursday in Phoenix. Behanan scored 15 points.

Michigan State managed a short run to get within four, but Louisville used its pressure to get a couple of steals and baskets to go up 43-32. Dieng followed with a couple more swats — one on Keith Appling that sailed into the stands — to keep the Spartans at arm's length.

“He played an exceptional game,” Pitino said.

Good enough to get Louisville into the regional final for the third time in six years, a trip to New Orleans and the Final Four within its sights.

PREP BOWLING

Central’s Johnson shocked by recognition

By NATHANIEL BRYAN
nbryan@thenewsenterprise.com

Keri Johnson wasn’t expecting the ovation she received Monday morning as the junior walked into Central Hardin High School.

Less than 48 hours after knocking off three straight Taylor County Lady Cardinals to win the girls’ individual title at the 2nd (Mid Kentucky) Region Tournament at Campbellsville’s Phillips Lanes, Johnson received a superstar welcome.

“I wasn’t prepared to see a whole bunch of my friends clapping and cheering me on when I walked in and even people I didn’t know cheering me on, but it was pretty cool,” Johnson said after practice Monday afternoon at Dix-E-Town Lanes in preparation for her debut at 8:10 this morning in the Ebonite International/KHSAA Bowling State Championships at Louisville’s Executive Strike and Spare. “I was shocked that the school has recognized as much as it has and everything. Like first block, (assistant principals Mike) Lawson and (Tim) Isaacs came in and slammed the door open right before the announcements came on. They scouted me out and they were like, ‘Well, Miss Johnson.’”

North Hardin senior Nick Conrad and junior teammate Kawika Glover, who earned two of the region’s four berths in the boys’ state tournament, had similar instances.

“It was crazy and I’m sure the same thing happened for Nick as it happened for me,” Glover said. “I was surprised that so many people knew about it. And then the people that didn’t know about it, when they found out, they were like, ‘Wow, that’s cool.’ It was crazy to see how many people keep up with what’s going on in their school. It shows that they really do care.”

They may care even more if the three have solid performances at State. All three will bowl three qualifying games and if they are among the top eight of their gender in their 32-player divisions, they’ll advance to the semifinals, where they’ll bowl two more games at 10:10 a.m.

The top five boys and the top five girls advance to the single-elimination stepladder, which involves the fifth seed playing the fourth seed in the first match. The winner plays the third seed, with that victor playing the second seed and that winner playing the top seed in the final.

Glover had the 30th-best region tournament total (990 total, 198 average), while Conrad (983, 196.6) is 31st. However, of the 160 games rolled in regional play by the 32 state qualifiers, Glover’s career-high 287 ranked him third. And Conrad, who rolled a career-best 254 in the region tournament, showed he could deliver under pressure by beating Glover for what they thought at the time was the last state spot for their region.

“Since this is my last year, it’s kind of exciting because I haven’t had this chance in previous years,” Conrad said. “I’ve bowled in a league and stuff, but you don’t have the chance to go to State or anything big like that.”

Conrad broke down in tears after barely beating Glover, who missed a 10th-frame spare conversion that would have extended or won the match. Afterward, Glover turned around and consoled his teammate.

Only later after he was yanked off the team bus did Glover learn there was a scoring error. Glover should have been seeded third – and therefore earning a guaranteed state berth – and would have only had to face Conrad if Conrad had won a play-in match against someone else. And that would have meant Conrad was going to State, too.

“It was definitely a roller coaster. It was different and I never expected any of that to happen. So when I found out I was in, it was definitely a shock,” Glover said. “That was just the way I was brought up, not to be a bad loser. When you do lose, you have to accept it as a man. I knew it was Nick’s senior year and it’s the first year we’ve had a bowling team, so it was something special for him. To be able to advance to State, that’s a big thing.”

Johnson stands a solid shot of advancing.

With her 1,009 five-game total and 201.80 average, Johnson is seeded 11th entering today’s three-game qualifier for the semifinals. However, those numbers don’t include the three consecutive games of 223 or better in the region stepladder. Plus, she beat second-seeded Taylor County sophomore Megan Hedgespeth, 230-183 in the region final.

“It was a lot tougher than I expected, but the fact that those three girls that I had to go through were experienced in competition and everything, I try harder when I’m going against so much more than me or the same amount,” Johnson said. “I had the best that day and I really had fun bowling with them. I stepped up, and I’m proud of myself for that.”

Johnson has shown she can put up big numbers and compete with the best. Or nearly the best, anyway, as Hedgespeth was the runner-up last year when bowling was still a club sport and had yet to be recognized by the KHSAA.

So Johnson’s eager to see if her torrid play carries over for one more week.

She’s also excited for Glover and Conrad and the John Hardin boys’ team – who all sent her texts or posted on her Facebook wall Saturday night after finding out she had won – and her rivals on the state-qualifying North Hardin girls’ baker team, too.

“We’re all proud of each other,” she said. “When we have to bowl against each other, there’s a little bit of that ‘I want to beat you,’ but deep down, we’re all proud of each other because this is a big accomplishment for Hardin County. It’s our first year and we have three schools that have bowling and we’re all going to State. We’ve accomplished so much already.”

BULLDOGS: get to State in first year

That set up a date with 5th Region runner-up Campbell County.

Led by Jordan Racke’s tournament-best 290, the Camels amassed 1,338 pins, just 44 behind the top-seeded and eventual champion Scott County Cardinals.

John Hardin trailed 126-122 in the first game after both teams had open frames in the seventh. But the Camels closed with strikes in the eighth and ninth and an open nine in the 10th, while the Bulldogs had open frames in the seventh, eighth and ninth as Campbell County got the win, 183-166.

“For us, if one messes up, it’s kind of like a chain reaction,” Humes said.

Campbell County had four strikes and a spare in a five-frame span as it took the second game as well, 220-203.

The Bulldogs did not go away quietly, rolling to a 256-187 win in the third game.

“When everyone starts closing their frames and everyone gets strikes, we all get hyped and we all bowl great,” Humes said. “That 256 would have beat a lot of teams. I don’t know, but we were all just on it that game and concentrating.”

Campbell County closed out the match with a 224-152 victory in the fourth game.

“It was really fun and to see how our team fought against them was really fun,” Gunter said. “The 256 was exciting. Everyone was having fun and everyone was yelling.”

John Hardin led 60-59 after three frames, but Campbell County struck out in the fourth through eighth frames and John Hardin had a strike followed by four consecutive open frames.

With the outcome no longer in doubt, John Hardin coach Mike Moritz substituted liberally to give all 11 Bulldogs a chance to roll at State. Every player on the roster competed in the region tournament, too.

“If I had the chance, we were going to try to get everybody in. If we had any kind of a lead or if I could feel comfortable, we were going to try to get everybody in,” Moritz said. “If we were far enough behind as someone had already banged us pretty hard, I was going to do the same. ... And every kid stepped up today.”

Not only did the Bulldogs improve on their seeding from the regional, but the best of the Bulldogs’ 11 region tournament games was 193.

“At the regional level, it’s still just a little above the level we bowl all the time,” Moritz said. “When you take that next step to State, it’s not just a regular step, that’s five or six steps up. But I think next year, we’ll be ready for this. For the first time here, we can take a little bit of a hit. The next time we’ll know what we’ve got to do and we’ll know how to do it.”

Ward said having some season bests and improving from last week was huge, especially when the team didn’t expect to even be here when preseason practices began in October.

“No, of course not. If there were, they were very low expectations,” Ward said. “So just to get this far was amazing.”

LADY TROJANS: happy to make State

The Lady Trojans’ seeding total of 934 was 74 pins – an improvement of 12.3 pins for the six bowlers counted – more than last week. Counting toward the total were Atkins (191), senior Tiffany McFee (176), junior Emina Hatler (157), freshman Jillian Shufelt (147), senior Dakota Grigsby (134) and a combined 129 from the senior tandem of Dynique Campbell and Stormie Brown. Dropped were junior Allie Dennis’ 130 and a combined 118 from the duo of freshman Ally Eastman and senior Melanie Morales 118. The Mansell sisters, senior Lauren and seventh-grader Regan, competed for the team, but sat out the seeding qualifier.

The seeding total helped North Hardin earn the 11th seed for the 16-team single-elimination tournament and was just seven pins off a top-10 seed.

“We bowled well and we bowled better here than we did in region and we got about the seed I thought we would get anyway,” said North Hardin coach Dan Robbins. “Don’t take anything away from Bryan Station, because they’re a very good bowling team, but they bowled their average. I looked up their average and they’re about a 160 and we’re about a 135 and that’s about how it played out.

“But it was still a great season. Fantastic,” Robbins added. “It definitely exceeded our expectations. So I don’t want them to be down on themselves. I want them to be happy about what they’ve done.”

Bryan Station, anchored by sophomore Crystal Land, made it to State last year before the KHSAA had offered bowling as an official varsity sport. Land, who was the fourth-place individual finisher last season and has been bowling since she was 3, marked in all six of her games against North Hardin.

The fledgling Lady Trojans didn’t have quite that much experience – or any, actually – compared to Land and Bryan Station.

“It was really nerve-racking and I was really scared. I didn’t know what was going to happen,” said North Hardin freshman Jillian Shufelt. “It was different bowling against people we had never bowled against before.”

Senior Dynique Campbell said competing against the more-established Lady Defenders was a step up in their usual level of competition.

“It was really tough. Where we’re from, we bowl higher than the rest of the girls except for Taylor County. But we win some, we lose some,” Campbell said. “It was fun being here and this being my last year, I wanted to go all out. But I was happy to be here.”

Shufelt said the experience could be a springboard for a solid sophomore season for herself and for the Lady Trojans.

“For this being our first season, it was really good that we made it to State. We’re the only team from Hardin County to actually make it here, on the girls’ side I mean,” Shufelt said. “I feel like if we pick it up, we’ll be better next year.”

Robbins said it helped the Lady Trojans were backed by one of the biggest fan sections, at least the easiest to pick out. Many fans wore pink North Hardin bowling shirts and some of the boys’ team members wore bandanas with the girls’ team members’ names on them.

“That’s the good thing,” Robbins said. “School spirit it is still alive and well. Now they’re jumping on the bandwagon for bowling.”

KENTUCKY: meets Indiana tonight

But this is merely a prelude for the top-seeded Wildcats (33-2). Unless they are cutting down the nets in New Orleans, this season will be judged a failure.

“You’re supposed to win every game by 25,” Calipari said. “If you’re winning by 15, what’s the issue? What’s going on with the program? If you lose, God forbid, lose one, how can we lose this game?”

Fourth-seeded Indiana (27-8) handed the Wildcats one of their defeats, a buzzer-beating 73-72 victory a couple of weeks before Christmas. While that was a mere speed bump for Kentucky on the way to finishing No. 1 in the rankings, the thrilling win was a huge boost to Indiana’s self-esteem.

Yep, the Hoosiers are back. “I feel like we’re playing with a lot more confidence than we were playing with back then,” said junior forward Christian Watford, who hit the winning 3-pointer against the Wildcats, a shot that has been replayed over and over on both sides of the Ohio River.

In 2002, Indiana made a surprising run to the national championship game, held in the same mammoth building where the Hoosiers face the Wildcats.

But that was a rare blip of success in the post-Knight era. Mike Davis didn’t last. Kelvin Sampson was forced out by allegations of serious NCAA violations. Taking over a program in tatters, Crean’s first team went 6-25 and managed only one win in the Big Ten.

Over the last two seasons, it was still difficult to detect even a blip of light at the end of the tunnel. The Hoosiers went a combined 22-41 overall and just 7-29 in conference play.

“When you’re coming off what we’ve dealt with the last couple of years, you have no choice but to treat every game as the most important game,” Crean said. “If you do that enough, it leads to moments like this.”

Kentucky won 24 straight before losing to Vanderbilt in the Southeastern Conference Tournament championship game. In a way, that might’ve helped the Wildcats, removing the burden of a winning streak before they headed off to the NCAA Tournament. They barely broke a sweat in their first two games.

“Their team is clicking on all cylinders,” Crean said.

The Hoosiers coach is most impressed by the way Calipari – for the third year in a row – has molded a collection of high school stars into a powerhouse college team.

Anthony Davis, Michael Kidd-Gilchrist and Marquis Teague could very well be the latest batch of Kentucky blue-chippers to stop off in Lexington for only a year on their way to the NBA. But they hardly come across as a bunch of kids worried about individual stats at the expense of the team’s success.

Three players have taken more shots than Davis, the team’s top scorer and defensive stopper. Kidd-Gilchrist ranks fifth on the team in field-goal attempts.

Darius Miller, one of only two seniors on the Kentucky roster, said this group seems to have meshed better than Calipari’s first two Kentucky teams.

“Everybody gets along. We really care about each other,” Miller said. “I think the main point is we have a lot of fun with everything we do. You see us laughing and smiling on the court, clapping, and you see all the emotion we leave on the court.”

Crean has his own super freshman, 6-foot-11 Cody Zeller. He leads the Hoosiers in scoring (15.5 points a game) and rebounding (6.5), giving Indiana an offensive weapon with at least a fighting chance against Davis.

Davis’ presence in the lane allows the Wildcats to cheat on the perimeter, because they know they’ve got a last line of defense who led the nation in blocked shots (4.6 a game).

During that December meeting, Indiana managed to get Davis in foul trouble and limit him to 24 minutes – a strategy the Hoosiers would certainly like to replicate in the rematch. But the freshman has played with much more discipline since then, called for no more than three fouls in any game.

That’s what Calipari likes to see.

“It’s simple what I tell these guys,” he said. “It’s not football. It is not a touchdown (if they score). We’ll score 7 seconds later. If you break down, let ‘em score. Don’t foul. I just say it over and over.”

While the border rivals meet regularly during the regular season, this will be the first time since 1983 – and only the fourth time overall – that they’ve faced off in the NCAA Tournament.

That only adds to the hype. “There’s a lot of household names that were coaches, players,” Crean said. “A lot of household-name teams, where people can remember a year and remember a team, and they can remember a lot of things about them.”

There’s only one way Kentucky fans want to remember their team.

Champions. “I love our fans,” Calipari said. “They’re crazy. They watch the game tapes three times. I don’t watch the game tapes three times. But that’s coaching and playing in Kentucky. It’s a little different.”

You haven't filed an income tax report in how long?

Dishonesty never pays

Governments lose billions of tax dollars every year from the income of individuals and businesses, as well as from unpaid taxes. Tax evasion can take many different forms: Tax shelters, undeclared work, excessive tax planning, omitting to submit an income tax return or to declare revenue earned from investments on the stock exchange, etc.

Consequences for tax evaders

Tax evasion has major consequences for those who are caught: It can result in a criminal conviction. If they are found guilty, they could receive a heavy fine, go to prison or end up with a criminal record with all the negative repercussions this situation can result in.

Consequences for the general public

This embezzlement of public funds also has consequences for society in general. Governments invest considerable sums of money in attempting to catch poor payers and tax evaders. This money, added to that lost every year due to tax evasion, amounts to a huge loss of revenue for governments. These losses directly affect their level of debt and influence their capacity to provide services and to finance programs in response to the needs of our society; social programs are often the first to be cut. Moreover, law-abiding individuals see their tax burden increased unfairly.

Tax evaders, as much as society in general, are affected by tax evasion. So pay what you owe now before having to pay too much at a later date.

Spring's hot color for homes?

Tangerine tang

By SARAH WOLFE
For The Associated Press

Bold, dramatic and invigorating, Tangerine Tango is dancing its way into home decor trends in 2012 with a punch of red-dish-orange panache.

The hue is a vivacious alternative to last year's cheery honeysuckle, and design experts say it's easy to incorporate into any home.

Pillows, bedspreads and tabletop accessories in this high-impact color can add spice to any room. Or add tangerine appliances and personal electronics for an unexpected pop of color, said Leatrice Eiseman, executive director of the Pantone Institute, the research arm of the Carlstadt, N.J.-based Pantone Inc., which sets color standards for the home and fashion industries.

"It's the perfect color to move us out of the dull and dreary winter months and into spring," said Sabrina Soto, host of HGTV's "The High Low Project."

PAINT/WALLPAPER

One easy and inexpensive way to brighten up your home and stay on top of the trends is to paint an accent wall in this hot hue.

A bit gun-shy of a tangerine living room? Secondary rooms, such as powder rooms and entryways, are perfect places to experiment with bold colors, Soto said. "Surprise your guests with walls that pop," she said.

Wallpaper by Pennsylvania-based York Wallcoverings dives head-first into the tangerine trend with a variety of luminescent, metallic gold patterns set against spicy orange backgrounds.

New Jersey-based Thibaut Design offers wallpaper in ornate, intricate, Jacobean paisleys and fanciful plumed birds in this year's color, as well as less dramatic florals set against a cream background.

FURNITURE

A lacquered side table or club chair and ottoman are small yet powerful ways to pop this color into a room through furniture.

"Sometimes the most subtle of gestures are the most outstanding," said Laura Dailey, vice president of merchandising with Atlanta-based Ballard Designs. "Use it on a smaller piece of furniture ... it's like what a tie does to a suit, that stand-alone piece that makes such a grand statement."

A dark reddish orange, tangerine goes well with neutrals like grays and beiges, as well as with distressed wood finishes, and can be worked into virtually any era, from Arts and Crafts to modern minimalism.

Designer Suzanne Kasler, who partners with Ballard, used a heavy tangerine linen from the European-inspired home furnishings retailer to upholster a pair of tufted slipper chairs that are pictured with nautical accents including a seashell-lined mirror, rattan baskets and large glass lanterns.

A similar tufted chair can be found on Ballard's site starting at $199 (www.ballarddesigns.com).

CB2 makes a parlor chair in "atomic orange" (www.cb2.com) for $699, as well as a blood orange "knitted pouf" that Soto likes as a small seat or ottoman.

She also recommends West Elm's cast-aluminum Martini side table that retails for $123 (www.westelm.com) and can double as a coffee table when paired in twos or threes.

ACCENTS

Persian rugs, dishtowels, candlesticks and vases are all fun, inexpensive ways to bring tangerine into your home through accent pieces.

"Try some fresh new towels in your bathroom," Soto said. "This fun color is the perfect contrast to white tile and porcelain."

She also likes an orange-and-cream stoneware vase from Target at $24.99 (www.target.com), and orange porcelain mini bowls from Crate and Barrel (www.crateandbarrel.com) for a pop of color in the kitchen at $1.95 each.

For lighting, Anthropologie offers a stacked glass table lamp ($298) a la 1970s kitsch in citrus shades (www.anthropologie.com), while a more modern shape can be found in the orange dome pendant by Kartell, for $263 (www.lumens.com).

Throw pillows in a variety of tangerine-esque shades are everywhere, including traditional stores like Linens 'N Things, for $69.99 (www.lnt.com) and more untraditional ones like specialty lighting retailer Lamps Plus, for $78.91 (www.lampsplus.com).

Soto reminds homeowners not to forget simple touches like a bouquet of fresh orange tiger lilies or gerbera daisies.

"A glossy, lacquered, red-orange serving tray can be the perfect punch of color for your ottoman or coffee table," she said.

Don't let the weather trick you into planting too soon

By DOUG OSTER
Pittsburgh Post-Gazette

Don't be fooled into starting your garden too early.

After a winter of above-normal temperatures, spring is following suit. Vegetable-garden veterans call this "false spring" and will hold off planting any tender crops, knowing cold weather, frost and even snow could come at any time. But there are plenty of things you can plant now if you follow some simple guidelines.

The worst thing gardeners can do is turn over the soil while it's too wet. This will destroy the structure, forming giant clumps that will dry and turn into impenetrable bricks better suited for building walls than growing anything.

If your garden is constructed of raised beds filled with organic matter, it might be workable. But most garden soil still needs time to dry out. The old adage said if the soil sticks to the shovel, it's too wet to garden.

This spring, I've seen gardeners who normally hold off planting early crops until April venturing to the garden. They add compost to the top of their planting beds then sow seed or set plants directly in the compost. This way, they don't have to worry about disturbing the moist spring soil.

The key to planting now is choosing varieties that thrive in coolest temperatures. I've planted lettuce, arugula, beets, peas, Swiss chard, radishes, carrots, cilantro and mixed greens. For faster germination of peas, I soak them overnight. I've also planted a flat of "Red Sails" lettuce.

Smaller, harder seeds like greens, lettuce, radishes and carrots will sit patiently waiting for the soil temperatures to be right. Bigger seeds, like peas, stand the chance of rotting if the soil does not reach optimum temperatures.

With days in the 60s and 70s, it's looking good for everything to sprout. But that doesn't mean they will be harvested before seeds started later in the season. It depends on the weather over the next month. Peas started in April sometimes are picked the same time as peas planted in March.

Many spring vegetable gardeners have floating row covers on hand to protect early crops. The lightweight, spun-bound, translucent fabric acts as a greenhouse. It's sold at nurseries and garden centers, is inexpensive and can be used for years. Even though cooler temperatures shouldn't kill early vegetables, the plants are happier and more productive under covers.

Many leafy greens should be planted several times during the season to ensure constant harvest. When it gets hot, lettuce, spinach and other greens will bolt, meaning go to seed. They become bitter and inedible. Sowing a crop every few weeks provides lettuce for when tomatoes are harvested.

Tender crops like tomatoes, peppers and beans, and vine crops like zucchini and cucumbers should not be planted until May. The plants and sprouted seeds will be killed by frost.

Flower gardeners safely can plant pansies and violas now because they can brave the cold when it returns. This early in the season, I prefer to plant in containers and keep them close to the house. They are better protected from the weather that way.

HORTICULTURE IN THE GARDEN

Learn how to protect pollinators

Insects pollinate a large percentage of food crops grown in the U.S. and all over the world. Many different species of pollinators exist, but the insect best equipped for this job is the honey bee. Honey bees are exceptionally efficient at collecting and transferring pollen among the flowers of a particular crop. In a practice known as "flower fidelity" groups of foraging bees will visit just one type of flower, collecting and storing pollen in baskets located on their legs. As the bees fly from flower to flower, pollen particles are transformed between male and female parts triggering the plant's reproduction cycle which results in a fruit or vegetable that may eventually find its way to a dinner table.

A growing concern for U.S. agricultural producers is the continuing decline of honey bee populations. According to the National Agricultural Statistics Service, the number of colonies in Kentucky has dropped dramatically over the last century from

GARDENER'S TOOLBOX SERIES

The Gardener's Toolbox Series of "How to Grow" classes are hour-long discussions on growing conditions, nutrients and varieties on a particular group of food plants.

■ Tomatoes, April 17

How do you pick your next favorite tomato variety? Let's talk about favorites and new favorites. Learn how to have the first tomato on the block. Get a few plants to try and test.

Classes are at the Hardin County Extension Service and begin at 6 p.m. Classes are $5 each, unless otherwise noted. Registration and payment must be received one week prior to class. Call 765-4121 to register.

152,900 in 1909 to just 5,000 in 2009.

Many studies are underway to try to pinpoint the cause for this decline, and so far several factors have emerged as detrimental to honey bee health. One of these involves the use of pesticides and insecticides which can produce harmful effects in other pollinators, too.

Approximately 4,000 species of native or wild bees assist the honey bee in making a large contribution to the pollination task. They include everything from large bumblebees to tiny sweat bees. There are miner bees, carpenter bees, mason bees, plaster bees and orchard bees — all named for the types of nests they build. Butterflies and some flies also pollinate certain plants.

You can help promote and protect insect pollinators by following a few simple rules. Never spray plants with insecticides when the plants are actively blooming. If chemical applications are necessary, strive for infrequent use and choose selective products with minimal impact on natural resources, especially bees.

Promote pollinators and invite them into your environment by planting a diverse landscape with flowers, trees and other greenery that bloom in succession from spring into fall.

For more information about insects found in your landscape and garden, contact the Hardin County Cooperative Extension Service at 270.765.4121 or www.hardinext.org.

Make your house more appealing when preparing it for sale

Are you one of the millions of people planning or trying to sell your home? Have you wondered how you could make your house more appealing than the other houses down the street that are also for sale? Well, let's talk about some ways that might be helpful.

"Staging your home" is a phrase that you have most likely heard many times, but what does it mean? Well, like a stage ready for a performance, it needs to look good. "Clean" and "neat" are the two words that best suit a staged look, so that means getting the carpet professionally cleaned, if necessary; add area rugs over parts that are stained or worn. Don't try to lie about the quality and worth of the home, but do try to make it look as presentable and appealing as possible.

Rid all rooms of excess clutter. If there are too many pieces of furniture in a room, it will look crowded plus it will make the room appear smaller than it is. Put some pieces of furniture in storage if necessary. Get rid of excess accessories. All those family pictures are appealing to you but mean nothing to a buyer. All those knickknacks you've displayed for years are special to you, but again, mean nothing to a buyer. The buyer is looking at your house, not your life. The furnishings and accessories are there as decoration. Oh, and be sure everything is sparkling clean.

A good paint job might be in order, and that means checking both the inside and the outside of the home to see what needs to be painted. Be sure that front door is welcoming, and if it needs painting, paint it. And while we're talking about the exterior, don't forget the roof. There is something about a dirty roof that makes the entire house look old and yucky.

Get the roof cleaned. Check for any missing or broken roof tiles. If your roof is of shingles, check for loose or curled shingles. Get these things fixed. If a potential buyer sees a roof that is in disarray, the first thought might be that there is a leak in the roof, meaning huge troubles. The second thought might be that there could be mold in the attic or inside the walls. That could be a sign of more huge trouble.

So, now that everything is clean and neat, consider placing a pot of flowers outside your front door. You've painted it; now accessorize it. Some experts feel that yellow flowers are the most appealing in general, but select what you feel complements your home the best.

Remember: Aim for clean and neat. Good luck with that sale.

ASK DAVE MYERS

Housing market shows signs of a rebound

DAVE MYERS

Home resales have climbed to their highest levels in nearly five years. In an unusual twist, activity might get a further boost from a recent rise in mortgage rates.

DEAR MR. MYERS: I would like to buy my first home this year, but I'm worried that prices are going to keep dropping. Should I buy now or keep waiting?

ANSWER: There's certainly no reason to rush out and make a purchase today, but you should at least start getting ready by getting preapproved for a loan to see how much you can borrow as the prime spring home-buying season approaches.

Although sales and prices have dropped in most parts of the country in the past several years, there are recent signs that the nationwide market might be coming back to life. Resales in January and February hit their highest levels since 2007, according to the National Association of Realtors, while permits for new construction — a barometer of future activity and a bellwether of developers' confidence in the economy — rose to their highest point in more than three years. Average prices for both new and resale homes have climbed modestly.

It's also worth noting that mortgage-interest rates recently have been climbing as the economy shows signs of improvement. The average rate on 30-year, fixed-payment loans in late March rose above 4 percent for the first time in six months, according to economists at the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp.

Traditionally, rising rates tend to push sales lower. But some experts say the recent increase could actually boost activity and prices by prompting more people to jump off the home-buying fence and finally make a purchase.

DEAR MR. MYERS: My wife and I are both 60 years old, and we hope to retire in about three years. We visited a retirement community in another state last month and really liked it, and with prices so low, we are thinking about buying a place there now, then renting it to tenants until we are ready to move into it ourselves. What do you think of our plan?

ANSWER: Frankly, not much.

Owning an out-of-state rental property is rarely a good idea, regardless of a person's age. Managing a far-away rental home can be difficult, but few small investors have the financial wherewithal to pay the stiff fees that professional management companies charge while still turning a profit.

Equally important, your letter states that you and your wife plan to retire "in about three years." That's a pretty fuzzy timeframe, and a lot can happen between now and then. Your retirement-housing choices might change dramatically if you or your spouse become ill, decide to work longer than expected or one of you passes away.

Coping with such issues would only be more difficult if the two of you had purchased a retirement home that you no longer needed. It's true that house values are low today, but you shouldn't purchase a property — especially in another state — with plans to lease it out until both you and your spouse pick a firm retirement date that's only six months or a year away.

DEAR MR. MYERS: We purchased a home last year and had to pay for a private mortgage insurance policy because our down payment was very small. Can we deduct the monthly cost of the insurance on the tax return that we are completing now?

ANSWER: Yes, provided that you don't have an above-average income.

Private mortgage insurance, commonly referred to as PMI, is usually required when a borrower makes a down payment that's smaller than 20 percent of the home's purchase price. Although the buyer must pay for the coverage, the policy essentially benefits the lender because it will reimburse the bank for some or all of its losses if the loan eventually goes into default.

The deduction was created through the federal Tax Relief and Health Care Act of 2006. It's gradually phased out for married joint tax filers whose adjusted gross income tops $100,000, and disappears for those who earn more than $109,000.

There are a handful of other minor requirements. For details, get a copy of Internal Revenue Service Publication 936, Home Mortgage Insurance, by calling the agency at 800-829-3676 or by downloading the document it from the www.irs.gov website.

The deduction expires this year, unless our bickering Congress extends it.

MAINTENANCE

DWIGHT BARNETT

Cleaning a contaminated crawlspace or basement

DWIGHT BARNETT

Q: I have an older home with a bothersome smell. After maneuvering into the dirt crawlspace under the house, a broken pipe was discovered. It had probably been leaking sewage for one or two months. We had the pipe repaired thinking this would solve the smell problem. It did not. We discovered thick plastic had been laid on top of a muddy composting mess. My husband removed the plastic and dug out several inches of sewage/mud. He also laid oyster shells on the damp ground to help neutralize the smell.

He then opened all foundation vents and placed a fan to blow air out from under the house. As long as the fan is blowing, the smell does not drift up through the floor. You suggested charcoal. Should we put open bags of charcoal on the dirt/mud under the house? What else can we do?

A: Raw sewage in a cellar, basement or crawlspace can be a health concern for occupants of a home. According to an article published by americanrivers.org:

"The most common pathogens in sewage are bacteria, parasites and viruses. They cause a wide variety of acute illnesses including diarrhea and infections. These illnesses can be violent and unpleasant, but mostly pass after several days or weeks with no lasting effects. In some cases, however, pathogens can cause serious long-term illnesses or even death."

The sewage and contaminated soils should be removed by professionals who have the experience and equipment to work in hazardous conditions.

Once the area has been decontaminated, a layer of 6-mil plastic vapor barrier can be installed.

If you are a determined DIYer, make sure you wear a long-sleeved shirt, rubber gloves, eye protection and a half-facemask respirator. Use a sled or piece of plywood as a skid with a rope attached so that a helper can pull the buckets of soil out and a second rope attached so that you can retrieve the empty buckets without having to go in and out with each load. Once the area has been cleaned, spread hydrated lime to reduce the odors and to dry the soils. Cover the entire dirt floor with a 6-mil vapor barrier. Discard the rubber gloves, clean your tools with a mild bleach-and-water solution and launder your work clothes immediately.

In a basement, use a wet/dry vacuum to clean the spill, emptying the canister in a toilet. Any contaminated material including carpeting and wall coverings should be discarded. Place smaller items in plastic garbage bags and set outside for proper disposal.

Woodwork and wood furniture can be washed using 1 cup household bleach to 1 gallon of warm water. Venting the basement using fans will help remove odors and speed drying.

ANTIQUES

KOVEL ON COLLECTING

Every antique has a story to tell

History becomes more interesting if you learn about it through objects and stories. It's the "rest of the story" that adds to the fun. A large pail that once held Dan Patch Roasted Coffee auctioned recently for $2,035. The bright-red can features a horse and rider in a harness race. The can is colorful, 11 1/2 inches tall and very decorative, but the price was boosted by the history it represents. Dan Patch was a brown horse, a pacer, born in Indiana in 1896. He broke the world's record for a harness race in 1906, and it took 32 years for another horse to go faster. He never lost a race. He was a celebrity, and coffee wasn't the only product named for him. Cars and washing machines and cigars bore his name, and so did popular toys. Crowds followed his appearances and as many as 100,000 people went to see the horse, which, according to reports, "radiated charisma." Dan Patch received fan mail and gifts while making as much as $1 million in a year. He retired from racing in 1909 and died in 1916. He remained a star for many years after his death, partly because his world record was not broken until 1938. Streets named Dan Patch still exist. Dan Patch Stadium is at a high school in Savage, Minn., where the horse lived after he was purchased by a Minnesotan in 1902. An annual Dan Patch Day festival is celebrated in his hometown of Oxford, Ind., and another annual Dan Patch Day is held in Savage. Books have been written about him, a movie was made about his life in 1949 and he's mentioned in a song from the 1957 Broadway musical, "The Music Man." But Dan Patch Ground Coffee was named for the horse well before the days of movies and television. You can still find Dan Patch memorabilia in Savage, Minn., today. Go to the Savage Depot Coffee Shop, the Razors Edge Barber Shop or the city library.

I inherited two antique Mettlach steins that were appraised six years ago for $1,700 each. I have been trying to sell them online and locally for less than that, but I have gotten no takers. Some dealers have made insulting remarks about my pricing. What's going on?

A: Some Mettlach steins in mint condition can sell for $1,700 or even more, but many sell for a lot less. Price depends on the rarity of a particular stein. In addition, you're dealing with a niche market and may not be reaching interested buyers. Try contacting a national auction house that focuses on steins. You will find several online.

My grandmother, who was born in 1886, left her favorite rocking chair to me. She lived in Chippewa Falls, Wis., and the chair is labeled "Webster Mfg. Co., Superior, Wis." The chair is oak and has a pressed design in the back's crest above six turned spindles. What can you tell me?

A: Webster Manufacturing Co. of Superior, Wis., was making chairs by the 1890s. In its early years, it was called the Webster Chair Co. By 1915 it was a major American chair manufacturer and had opened a factory in at least one other city. It appears to have gone out of business during the Depression. Pressed oak chairs like yours were especially popular in the late 19th century, so it is likely your chair dates from that period. Depending on its condition, it would sell for $100 or more.

I have a kerosene lamp marked "Queen Anne" and "Scovill Mfg. Co." I know it's about 100 years old. Can you give me some information about it?

A: Scovill Manufacturing Co. opened in 1802 in Waterbury, Conn., under the name Abel Porter & Co. It made brass buttons and operated under various names and owners through the years. James Mitchell Lamson Scovill and William H. Scovill eventually took over the business, which was incorporated as Scovill Manufacturing Co. in 1850. Scovill made brass lamps, artillery fuses, munitions, medals, daguerreotype plates, cameras and other items. After 1866 it also made coin blanks for the U.S. Mint. Scovill holds several patents for improvements to lamp burners. "Queen Anne" is a type of burner that was in common use in the late 1800s. It was made by Scovill and other companies. New Queen Anne burners are available today for repair and restoration of old lamps. Scovill is still in business, with headquarters in Clarkesville, Ga. Today the company makes fasteners for clothing and light industrial use and holds a patent for the gripper snap, introduced in the 1930s. Your lamp was probably made in the late 1800s.

If all parts are original, it is worth about $100 to $150.

I have an item called a "motion teaser." It includes five heavy silver balls about an inch in diameter. Each is attached to a string and the strings are attached to a wooden frame. You swing one ball so it touches the next one and then they all swing back and forth. However, it stops in about a minute. Aren't they supposed to keep swinging back and forth by themselves? Every once in a while, I see one of these in an old movie and the balls keep swinging back and forth indefinitely. Am I doing something wrong? I don't see what the big deal is if you have to start it every other minute. Someone gave me this. I think this it's from the 1970s or '80s.

A: Your toy was invented in 1967 by Simon Prebble, an English actor, and is known as "Newton's Cradle" because it demonstrates one of Isaac Newton's laws of motion: "For every action, there is an equal and opposite reaction." When you pull the first ball back and release it so that it swings and hits the row of balls, the energy is transferred through the line of balls to the ball on the other end, causing it to swing out at approximately the same distance and back to hit the stationary balls. If you pull two balls out, two balls will swing out from the opposite end. It's not a perpetual motion machine, because some momentum and energy are lost with each hit due to friction. The length of time it will keep going is based partly on how well it's built. Toys like this were made under several names and in different sizes. They always have an odd number of balls, usually five or seven. Someone has even made Newton's Cradle using 15-pound bowling balls hung from 20-foot cables.

Dan Patch, a famous pacer, is pictured on this coffee tin. The horse was a celebrity in the early 1900s. Today his fame lives on in collectibles and, of course, in harness-racing record books. William Morford auctions, in Cazenovia, N.Y., sold this 11-inch tin for $2,035.

TIP: An unglazed rim on the bottom of a plate usually indicates it was made before 1850.

MAINTENANCE

SUPER HANDYMAN

Get your lawn into shape for the start of spring

If spring hasn't come to your town yet, it's not too far off. How does your lawn look? Any bare spots? Here are our tips for fixing that for the DIY'er without a green thumb.

First take a close look at the areas. Do you see any pests? Does the spot get any sun? You may want to take the damaged grass to a garden center to see if there is anything they can spot that would give you a clue about what happened.

Remove any damaged grass or pests. Turn over the soil with a fork to loosen it. Add a little compost and mix this into the soil. Rake it flat and tamp it down smooth.

Check with your county agriculture agent or garden professional to see which grasses do best in your area and climate.

If you are planting seed, sprinkle it over the top of the soil, then put a thin layer of soil over the top. Tamp this down. A little mulch on top of this can help retain moisture in the soil and keep delicate seeds from being blown away or picked up by birds.

If you are planting sod, make sure the level of the soil is a little lower than the surrounding area. Place the sod on top and press it firmly into place.

Water the area thoroughly. Water it twice a day until it has started to grow. Don't overdo it, but don't let it dry out either.

A little organic fertilizer once in a while also is a great way to keep your yard looking good.

Q: Our bathroom countertops are all in pretty good shape but are made of marble. It looks dull, and we would like to see if we can get them to look better and get back a little more of the shine that it once had. What would you recommend that we use for this?

— L.N.

A: Check a hardware store or home center that sells marble. It probably will have a cleaner/polish that will work just fine for this. Most are easy to use and should give you the results you are looking for. If you want to try using something you probably have on hand, a little automobile wax can be used. Just rub it in and buff it out, and you'll get a nice shine as well as protection on the surface. You'll have to repeat it occasionally, but it will look pretty good.

Q: I have given up on cleaning the grout in my bathtub. I plan to scrape it out and apply new grout. The problem area is only on the bottom half of the wall, so can I just do that part, or do I need to do the whole thing? — V.C.

A: Matching the grout color can be tough, so if it's tinted, you may want to do the whole wall. If it's just plain white, you probably can get away with doing only the part you need to redo. Use a mildew-resistant mix and a sealer over the whole wall.

Should you hire a pro, or tackle that home-repair job yourself? Chip Wade of HGTV's "Curb Appeal" weighs in on some common questions.

Q: CAN I REPLACE A CHIPPED TILE IN THE MIDDLE OF MY KITCHEN FLOOR?

A: Hire a pro. You'll need a tile-and-flooring expert with an oscillating tool and an abrasive grout attachment to remove the grout and tile pieces, then pop in a new one. After a 24-hour drying period, the pro will come back and apply an extra layer of grout to finish the job. Prices vary depending on where you live, but I'd budget around $200 for the project.

Q: HOW DO WE KEEP OUR WINDOWS FROM FOGGING UP IN THE WINTER?

A: Give it a go. Condensation on the inside of windows could mean your house is too humid, and a dehumidifier will solve the problem. If that doesn't work, it may mean air is leaking in around the glass. Buy some window glaze at the hardware store and apply it to the edges of the windows to create a seal. If you have wooden windows, the frames may have cracks, and a simple paint touchup likely will fix the leak.

Q: WHAT DO I DO ABOUT A BROKEN DOORBELL?

A: Give it a go. Doorbells are pretty simple devices, but they're also electrical appliances that should be handled carefully. First try flipping your fuse breaker — the problem could be just a blown fuse. If the doorbell still isn't working, turn off your power, then unscrew the switch plate and check to see if the two wires behind it are connected tightly; you may need to adjust them. Still not hearing a buzz? It could mean there's no power running to the switch. Time to call in an electrician for the fix so you don't risk getting shocked or burned.

GARDENING

YARDSMART

My woeful tale of crown rot

I can count the number of truly major mistakes in my gardening career. There is one great faux pas that I will never forget, and, hopefully, it will educate all of you about this simple yet deadly error.

For years I nurtured the small wisteria planted on the south side of my garage. I hand watered it every summer and gathered a mulch of rocks to keep competing weeds at bay. Each winter it was carefully pruned to maximize the blooms that were extraordinary tassels of lavender come spring.

Time passed and the wisteria engulfed the side of the garage, creating a soft mass of foliage to make an otherwise uninteresting building into a gardenesque cottage. Then one year the new foliage wilted in June, a time when it definitely should not have wilted. This was not just drooping tips, but the entire vine with every leaf just sagged. I deep-watered it, but no change was forthcoming. The wisteria simply died.

My postmortem told me what had really happened with that vine, which reached back to the previous autumn when the leaves fell. I was just too lazy or neglected my chores, so the fallen leaves built up beneath the plant to sit all winter and spring. Ordinarily, this is not a problem since a plant's own leaves become its most natural mulch.

When I moved all the dead leaves away from the trunk of the wisteria down to rock-mulch level, I knew immediately what I had done – or, more correctly, what I had failed to do. The leaves built up against the wisteria trunk bark, but did not decompose normally. The rock mulch separated the leaves from the soil to prevent decay agents from breaking them down.

While mounded up against the wisteria trunk, the leaves cut off oxygen to the bark, which causes it to rot. This, in turn, kills the thin living cambium immediately beneath the bark that carries nutrients and moisture from root to shoot. When this occurs, the vascular system is literally cut off or “ring barked.” For most woody trees and shrubs, this is fatal.

The condition is known as crown rot, and I've seen it before in many scenarios. One time, a home gardener laid plastic under decorative wood-chip mulch too close to the bark of the tree. That Idaho locust died from crown rot, too.

One thing you learn from reading about my failure is to keep a close eye on the base of your woody trees, shrubs and vines. Do not allow soil or organic matter or anything else to build up against the bark. When using mulch, always allow an inch or two of clear space around the trunk so there's nothing close enough to cause a problem.

Crown rot surprised me, attacking an old well-established and beloved plant. It goes to show how even experienced gardeners can make mistakes, too. When you face your own failures in the garden, don't feel like a failure. Just remember my motto: You learn more from what you do wrong than what you do right.

Clean up your showerhead language

Q: I want to install a showerhead and have been trying to choose a new one. But it seems that everyone I talk to has a different term for a showerhead, and there's a lot of choices. Please explain the correct terms. This way I'll sound like an expert the next time I talk to a salesperson. – Jeff, Rhode Island

A: Changing a showerhead is one of those jobs that most do-it-yourselfers want to try. The key is to be properly prepared right from the start. With that in mind, here's a basic list of the most popular types of showers:

- Single-function show-

erhead – This is your basic showerhead that attaches to the chrome shower arm sticking out of the wall.

- Multifunction showerhead – Installs the same as the single-function, but will have different spray settings, like wide, narrow and/or massage.
- Rain showerhead – Usually requires a special installation. This is a wide head designed to be mounted higher.

- Body shower spray – Usually requires a special installation. The head is mounted lower on the wall, and sprays out horizontally.
- Personal shower – Attaches to the shower arm with a special hanger/bracket. It has a hose so the shower can also be used as a hand-held spray.

Bottom line: If you use these terms when asking about a your new showerhead, you'll no longer be speaking with “watered down” information.

DECORATING HOMESTYLE

Spicing up your kitchen with color, accents

If it's not in the cards to renovate your kitchen, don't worry. You can still transform the look of this hardworking heart of the home just by decorating it well. Here are three tips to get you started.

1. ADD ZEST WITH ACCENTS. It's time to harness the power of accents to make your kitchen look sensational.

Here are a few of the hot spots I like to hit when I decorate a kitchen:

■ Over the Cabinets

When you decorate the tops of cabinets, remember that accents look smaller when they are up high. Little accents will not only get lost up there, they will make the overall display look busy. My favorite approach is to create a tight cluster of interesting accents, combining a variety of sizes and shapes. Consider using brightly colored pottery vessels.

■ By the sink

My friend Anne just built her home, so she had the enviable opportunity to create her dream kitchen. And boy, did she succeed. To bring out the great bones of the space, she's selected a few great accents. For example, she perched vases above her sink. I really like this little display because it's so functional, not frivolous. She can leave the vases empty, giving her a little pop of color, or she can fill them with spring blooms.

Or consider what Rich did in his condo's kitchen. Even though the space around the sink is tight, he made it marvelous by placing artwork behind the faucet. What an inventive backsplash. Similarly, I have a platter behind my faucet because I like the added layer and another chance to decorate with dishes.

■ On shelves and ledges

If you are lucky enough to have shelves, ledges or niches in your kitchen, fill them up with accents that express your personality. The intriguing display Anne created for the ledge above her stove weaves together a few of her mother-in-law's Royal Dalton Toby mugs and a hanging montage of transferware plates. Simple but sensational.

I added a little shelf in my kitchen, hanging it above the doorway that leads to my basement steps, so I could have another spot to display accents. The antique wooden ledge has a few hooks at the bottom, and I like to hang glass votive holders from them, decorating them for the season.

■ On an island or counter

Decorating kitchen islands is a blast, especially when you have as much space as Anne does in her dream kitchen. Anne wanted to leave the majority of the island open so her kids would have plenty of room to eat breakfast or do homework. So she created a simple display at the island's center, anchoring it with two concrete garden statues. Featuring statuary on an island is a fabulous idea, but be sure to put something under the statues so they don't scratch the counter. And make sure they're not something you'll need to move often. These babies are heavy.

MARY

Like me, Rich doesn't have a lot of counter space in his kitchen, so he has to carefully choose what he puts out. He artfully combines some necessities, like his countertop TV, with service pieces that maximize space. I use tiered servers every time I entertain because they are lovely to look at, use space wisely and add vertical height to the display.

2. ADD PERSONALITY WITH COLOR. Your kitchen is a great place to work in your favorite hues because you can get away with things in this room that you wouldn't in more formal rooms. When I first laid eyes on Rich's kitchen, with its bright orange cabinets, I jumped for joy. How bold. How refreshing.

If you can't replace your kitchen cabinets, transform them with paint, like Rich did. Bright orange might not be your pick, but there are so many wonderful colors out there, from creamy whites to serene blues to zippy reds, that you're sure to find one that makes you smile.

When I renovated my kitchen, I picked cream cabinets, backsplash and walls. But I still wanted to bring in a pop of color, so I painted the ceiling blue.

Recently, I added Roman shades in a teal-and-raspberry paisley.

Another way to add color to your kitchen is through an area rug. I can't have a rug in my kitchen because we are too sloppy — it would be covered with dog hair and spills. But I envy my friends who can handle rugs because these little islands of color and pattern do so much to warm up a room.

3. ADD STYLISH STORAGE. We all have lots of stuff to store in our kitchens, so why not make those storage containers as lovely as possible? For example, I found an old planter that fits in the spot between my stove and the wall, and filled it with Dan's cooking oils and vinegars. I collected cooking spoons in an inexpensive white chalice.

Another must-have kitchen-storage tool is a wonderful tray or two. Anne uses a big tray to hold drink decanters in her kitchen's wet-bar area. Trays give everything that's put upon them a dignified air.

Cramped kitchen treated to tasteful makeover

The kitchen is the heart of the home, but what do you do if your kitchen is distinctly unappetizing? Victor and May inherited a dysfunctional kitchen renovation from the previous owners of their home, who managed to butcher the space with a choppy layout and a monstrous obstacle of an island.

May is a nurse who works 12-hour shifts. When she's home she spends a lot of time in the kitchen, cooking one meal that fits her son's special dietary needs and another meal for the rest of the family.

But there was no joy to be found when cooking in this kitchen. Only two people could be in the room at the same time and the ceramic floor was way too hard for comfort. And if that weren't enough, the tiny kitchen was sandwiched between a den and a dining room, with walls restricting the flow of movement.

So what was the recipe to fix this nightmare? Simple: We basically blew up the whole room and then began to rebuild Victor and May's kitchen from the floor up. To give them the space they needed, I decided to remove the wall between the kitchen and the family room, and enlarge the archway into the dining room. Today's busy families spend a lot of time in these rooms, so my plan called for seamlessly blending these areas into one multifunctional space.

During the demo phase we uncovered a couple of unexpected obstacles. Blown-in ceiling insulation had to be removed in order to install recessed pot lights. And remember that shoddy reno job I mentioned? It turns out that we had to shore up a supporting wall before we could even get started on the rest of our plan.

But once all of that was done, this project really started to heat up. My favorite part of the renovation is the treatment we applied to the floor. We had to select a material that would meld with the cherry-toned hardwood and marble floor tile in the adjoining rooms, while providing the cushiony comfort May needed. Inspiration struck, and I chose a three-color Mar-moleum checkerboard tile floor that is easy to clean and soft underfoot.

CANDICE OLSON

My plan called for a lot of counter space and storage capabilities, two things every kitchen needs. We extended a durable and stain-free quartz counter down the entire length of this space, and a tiled backsplash that picks up the floor colors. In the "den" end of the new kitchen, a cozy sofa and a small round table offer casual seating, while a built-in desk with lots of adjoining storage space provides a convenient place to do homework. A wall-mounted TV is positioned above the desk, which was one of Victor's special requests.

White Shaker-style cabinetry was chosen for the perimeter of the kitchen, while dark cabinets were selected for the long, multi-purpose island and for storage units surrounding the desk. To give the dark wood a bit of a distressed look, black stain was sprayed onto each door and then removed by hand with a cloth, leaving behind just a hint of black in corners and crevasses. The final effect is modern with a twist of traditional.

We found a very cool hanging cutlery-themed light fixture for over the island, and selected a small chandelier for the breakfast nook, and its larger cousin for the dining room. New stainless-steel appliances, including a roomy French-door fridge with bottom freezer, are stylish yet incredibly functional. The fridge is flanked by built-in pantry storage and lots of cupboards. Everything is in its place – and there's a place for everything.

New draperies and a dining-room suite put the finishing touches on this space. Victor and May's kitchen reno was a huge project that took a month to complete, but in the end they were thrilled. Their brand-new kitchen has all the right ingredients: style, functionality, form and flow. Now the kids just have to learn how to cook ...
